Dana's Purchase.

NEW YORK, May 27.—[Special.]—Chas. A. Dana has purchased a piece of property situated in the northwest corner of Madison avenue and Sixtieth street, paying for it $65,000. For a sum similar to the purchase money he mortgaged it to the Germania Life Insurance Company. Charles Buck, who disposed of the property, is also owner of the remainder of the land on that Madison avenue block, which extends along Sixty-first street 120 feet. This block is mortgaged to the same company for $20,000, payable in three years.

Logan's Chances for the Presidency.

CHICAGO, May 27.—[Special.]—Governor Foster of Ohio was here yesterday. To a correspondent he said: "The people of this state think very kindly of Gen. or Jno. A. Logan as a possible presidential candidate. I was talking of Logan with Jno. Sherman a short time ago. He expressed himself very favorably to Logan's candidacy. Logan is not exactly my kind of a republican, still I like him. He never was a stalwart of the Conkling style of place disturber, and he would poll a full vote."

Died, 109 Years Old.

SYRACUSE, May 27.—[Special.]—Dinah John, popularly known as "Aunt Dinah" throughout the state of New York, died at the Onondaga Indian reservation, aged 109 years. Aunt Dinah was married to Thomas John early in the present century. Thomas was a warrior in Captain Cole's company of New York militia, in the war of 1812. He went with a company as cook. The couple served throughout the war. Aunt Dinah drew a pension for about fifty years. She was nurse to ex-Gov. Horatio Seymour at his birth.

Beecher Prays for the Czar.

NEW YORK, May 27.—[Special.]—At Plymouth church yesterday morning Beecher prayed for the czar, that his life might be spared and his heart turned to the Lord, and that dark and disastrous schemes, by which means passion sought to rule, might be defeated, and nobler manhood, in which every man might be free, should be achieved. The sermon related to love as a central element of christianity, to which even conscience was secondary.

The Negroes Protest.

ST. LOUIS, May 27.—A dispatch from Muskogee, Indian territory, says negroes in the Cherokee nation have drawn up a strong protest against the recent action of the Cherokee council, in declaring that a large amount of money received from the government in payment for lands shall be distributed only to Cherokees by blood. There are over ,000 negroes in the nation, who claim the same rights as Indians, and who will sign the protest and then send it to the secretary of the interior.

Obeying the Pope's Circular.

NEW YORK, May 27.—[Special.]—A London cable letter to the Tribune states that the priests of Ireland, with few exceptions, are obeying the pope's command not to aid the testimonial fund, and that while many speeches in support of the fund are made, not much money is given. The attempt of Parnell's supporters to make Errington and the English ministers responsible for the Pope's circular failed.

The Star Routers' Property Changes Hands.

ST. LOUIS, May 27.—A dispatch from Independence, Mo., says a gentleman named Sawyer arrived there from Washington, to take possession of all the property of H. M. Vale, of star route notoriety. The property consists of a handsome suburban residence that cost $50,000, a large number of blooded stock, and an extensive wine cellar. Whether Sawyer is acting as owner or agent is not known, but the general opinion is that Vale is preparing for the worst.

CINCINNATI, May 27.—[Special.]—Orin Hickok is giving St. Julian and Overman daily exercise. He says he will probably take them to Detroit, leaving the colts here to be trained. State Senator Loses his Mind.

CHICAGO, May 27.—At a late hour Friday night a policeman discovered a man wandering among the railroad tracks. The man evidently was out of his mind, saying he was being pursued by headlights of locomotives, and that his enemies were trying to get him run over. He was taken in charge and turned out to be State Senator Thos. Fish of Marshall county, Iowa.

A Strike Ended.

CINCINNATI, May 27.—Last night the shoe manufacturers and shoe operators came to an understanding and terminated the lock-out, which kept 2000 workmen idle for a fortnight. The workmen recede from their refusal to finish goods commenced by non-union men, and all hands resume work to-morrow. They leave a settlement of the difficulty to a committee on arbitration.

CRIMINAL.

MURDER IN OHIO.

STEUBENVILLE, O., May 27.—Two years ago Alex. Mygall, wife and eight children came from England, settling in Mansfield, Pennsylvania. His wife left him on account of abuse and went to Steubenville with John Bird. She had three daughters and one son with her, Mygall keeping the four elder children. She married Bird and lived with him. This morning the father and son arrived, and asked to see his wife and children. Bird assented, provided he would raise no disturbance. He was calm for a time, and then became abusive, and demanded that the woman go back with him. She refused, and Bird took her part. The two men went into the yard in the rear of the house, when Mygall suddenly drew a revolver and shot Bird in the back of the head, instantly killing him. He then returned to the house and struck the woman, and she fled. Her cries summoned help, and Mygall was arrested.

"OWNEY GEOGHEGAN'S" RETURN FROM PRISON.

NEW YORK, May 26.—[Special.]—The saloon at 105 Bowery, formerly occupied by "Owney Geoghegan," has been dismantled; but a number of persons who had served in it assembled there to greet the "old employer" on his return from the penitentiary. He had been met by friends at Fifty-second street, where the prison boat had left him, and they accompanied him to his old stand. He found it much changed, and he went away after saying that it would probably never be opened by him again. He might do something in the livery business, but could not tell. Geoghegan has served his full term of one month on Blackwell's Island and has paid his fine of $600.

FIENDISH ATTEMPT TO DESTROY A WHOLE FAMILY.

ST. LOUIS, May 27.—A fiendish plot to destroy a whole family is reported from the town of Nelson, Illinois. Friday night ropes were tied to all the door knobs of the house of Mr. Boyd, and then lashed to trees in the yard. Coal oil was then poured in and around the foundation of the dwelling and fired near the main house. Boyd was awakened by the noise of the flames, and luckily was able to break open the doors, and with his wife and several children rushed through the flames without harm, but the escape from a terrible death was a very narrow one. It is not known by whom or for what motive the devilish deed was committed.

THE CZAR CROWNED

The Impressive Ceremony Safely Performed at the Kremlin.

THE PEOPLE'S DEVOTION TO THE EMPEROR.

A Scene of Bewildering Magnificence—The Procession, the Populace, the Decorations, Etc.

NEW YORK, May 26.—[Special.]—The Herald's Moscow special says: Moscow is enjoying well earned repose to-day throughout the city, except where workmen are making grand stands to be used in the procession. Fancy prices are being paid for copies of the proclamation. Five rubles are being given for a portion of the original distribution. Regalia are being transported from the hall of armour to the throne room. They consist of a collar of the order of St. Andrew in diamonds, the sword of the empire and the standard of the empire, the great seal, the imperial mantle of the emperor, the mantle of the empress, the imperial orb, the scepter and the crown of the emperor and empress. All were carried on gold-cloth cushions by the grand master of ceremonies and other functionaries of the crown. A large diamond is on the scepter that is supposed to have been bitten out of the eye of a Hindoo god by a Russian peasant, or, as some say, by a French sailor and sold to Count Orloff, from whom Catherine the Great transferred it to the crown jewels for a consideration.

The emperor has forbidden the throwing of copies of the proclamation among the crowd, as the struggle was so violent to-day that a peasant was very seriously injured. Many imagine that the possession of this imperial document, with the red seal at the foot, gives them some right to a property or money qualification.

OUTLINING THE CORONATION.

NEW YORK, May 27—[Special.]—Herald's Moscow: To-morrow morning shortly after 8 o'clock, before New Yorkers are half awake, the coronation will begin in the Uspenski Sobor, or the Church of the Assumption, within the Kremlin, where the czars from the time of Ivan the Terrible have been crowned. The solemn ceremonies will be witnessed by only a few hundred persons, so small is the beautiful but most sacred church in Russia. Among the favored ones are the members of the imperial family, the royal and princely guests, the chiefs of special embassys and their ladies, two Russian artists, and three Russian and five foreign correspondents. It is the first time in the history of the coronations that representatives of the foreign press have been permitted to witness the ceremony. It is an innovation entirely due to the action of his majesty the czar himself. The papers represented will be the New York Herald, London Times, Paris Figaro, The Vossische Zeitung of Berlin, and the Neue Freie Presse of Vienna.

A BRILLIANT AND IMPRESSIVE SCENE.

The scene outside the cathedral will, if the weather is fine, be brilliant and interesting. All around the entrance covered tribunes have been erected, where princely and noble guests will be seated in view of the imperial procession as it emerges from the palace and descends the steps, passing through lines of soldiers till it reaches the door of the church. Here it will be seated on a special tribune. Picturesquely clad delegates and representatives of the Asiatic tribes and people, under the sway of the mighty czar, Kivans, Bokharans, Armenians, Cherkessians, Osdjaks, Samoyeds, Tartars, Mongols, Tangues, Buriats, Yakuts and Tchuchees, with other Central Asiatics, are peculiarly a feature of the fetes. They lend much color to the groupings in the processions and fetes, besides making vivid to the mind the fact of the vastness of territory and numbers of races ruled over by the czar; though, as a well known American remarked yesterday, they reminded him strongly of his old friends of "The Arabian Knights." Ali Baba and the Barber of Bagdad did not seem to be missing. All were there.

THE CEREMONY FIVE HOURS LONG.

The ceremony within the church will last over five hours. As seats have not been permitted within Russian churches, the ordeal to the ladies of the court and the diplomatic world will be a very severe one.

During Thursday, Friday and to-day all the scenes have been of rare brilliancy and of colored picturesqueness of grouping. People struggled earnestly for the possession of the beautifully done proclamations. In one case three moujiks were seen struggling for one, ending in each getting a torn piece, a sight which immediately awed them, and put an end to the strife. The dense crowds were so eager to possess copies that no less than four persons were crushed to death on Thursday, so the difficulty necessitated the heralds abstaining from distributing more, and orders have been given to place thousands of copies in each church in Moscow, where the people can procure them on Sunday.

AMERICANS IN MOSCOW.

NEW YORK, May 27.—[Special.]—Herald Moscow special: Very few Americans have ventured to visit Moscow during the fetes, frightened at the high price of rooms and the improbability of finding accommodations in the hotels. Mr. and Mrs. Mackay, who have come from Paris for the fetes, occupy the first floor of the hotel Dossant, where to-night they gave a dinner to members of the United States special mission, which includes Minister Hunt from St. Petersburg, accompanied by Mrs. and Miss Hunt, Thomas Hunt, Rear Admiral Baldwin and wife, with Captain Gerhard, chief of staff; Lieutenant Commander G. A. Converse, principal aide de camp; Lieutenant A. O. Paul, flag lieutenant; Ensign T. S. Rodgers, and Mr. W. D. Chandler, attached as private secretary. The emperor and empress received the special missions, with ladies accompanying them, on Wednesday, and both were specially gracious to the American representatives. The empress seems to have won all hearts, but caused Chandler no little consternation by asking him if he belonged to the navy, and if he suffered sea-sickness coming across. With Mackay the empress chatted pleasantly about California.

RUSSIAN CREDIT COMING TO THE FRONT.

Russia's courtesy to the foreign press appears destined to bring about great results for the empire. The correspondents are allowed to telegraph without submitting to the censor. They are giving, if one may judge from the extracts telegraphed back to Russia, promising pictures of Russia's future. A Moscow paper on this subject says: Foreign correspondents see that Russia does not stand on the verge of bankruptcy, as is the popular idea abroad, and is not standing on a dynamite volcano, and they are telling the truth about Russia. The first result is seen from the Vienna, Paris and London bourses, where Russian paper is going up steadily every day, and it will not be long before foreign bankers will be offering Russia loans and credits which formerly cost Russia such enormous sacrifices to procure. The same paper urges Russia to shake herself free from her depression of spirits and to take advantage of the favorable consideration which is being shown abroad in her favor. As a prince said to me yesterday, "The world will see that the opinion hitherto implicitly believed in Europe, that Russia is a second Ireland is totally devoid of foundation, and Russians believe that true light is breaking through the darkness that has so long prevailed."

DEVOTION TO THE CZAR.

At the Neskuchnoi palace, three miles from the Kremlin, the beautiful residence where the emperor has spent three days in fasting, a peculiar scene occurred. The emperor had sent for his horse, in order to take a ride, when the people seeing it, carried it bodily to the door of the palace. Among all classes of the population this desire to express devotion to the czar was shown and their joy at the emperor's appearance, among merchants and moujiks, was very enthusiastic. All are hopeful that the coronation will mark the end of the commercial depression that has long prevailed, and make commerce an era of great prosperity for Russia and the Russian people.

MOSCOW NOTES.

Maria Theresa, of Portugal, the arch duchess, left a pleasant impression here on American lady guests by her beautiful presence and charming amiability.

Next week there will be receptions and balls at the Imperial palace and at the residences of the various special embassadors.

Every day the Moscow papers occupy themselves with stories of Mackay's wealth. They seem to be under the impression that he has the financial care of the American special mission, and that he intends to spend $300,000.

The Coronation.

ST. PETERSBURG, May 27.—The czar was crowned with brilliant ceremonies and without the slightest interruption of the programme.

MOSCOW, May 27.—At 7 o'clock this morning the inauguration of the magnificent ceremonies attendant upon the coronation of the emperor and empress of Russia was announced by the ringing of hundreds of bells and by the thunder of artillery. Even at that early hour the streets were thronged with people, visitors from abroad and from other parts of the empire crowding the residents, and all striving to find eligible places from which to obtain a view of the procession and a portion of the ceremony.

During the entire night there was unusual activity on the streets, for not only were people there whose anxiety concerning the interest in the coronation kept them awake, but strong guards of soldiers patrolled all parts of the city, giving the streets a very martial appearance. Great bodies of soldiers, shortly before 6 o'clock, were stationed along the route of the procession, four miles in length, and occupied the streets on either side, keeping the people on the walks. All unreserved spaces in the streets were speedily filled by eager sight-seers, while the windows, doorways and house-tops were let out at fabulous prices to visitors.

INTO THE CHURCH.

Those dignitaries of the realm who were to take part in the actual ceremony assembled, according to the pre-arranged programme, at the cathedral of the Holy Assumption within the walls of the Kremlin. These functionaries entered the magnificent building at just 7:30 A. M. At about 8 there followed the order princes of foreign governments, nobility of Russia and other states of Europe, and special and regular ambassadors of foreign countries residing in Russia. The utmost care was exercised to prevent the admission of any unauthorized or improper persons, each man as he appeared at the entrance being made to exhibit a carefully prepared ticket, which was subjected to the closest scrutiny. This form was observed at the wall of the Kremlin and at the doors of the cathedral, at the request of General Von Schweinitz, ambassador from Germany. Eighty members, comprising diplomatic corps, assembled at his house and were conveyed thence to the Kremlin in elegantly equipped coaches, and richly gilded as to their harness and coats of arms. The remainder of the diplomatic body, consisting of attaches of various legations, were assigned positions in the tribune just outside the cathedral proper, but inside the inclosure of the Kremlin.

BEGINNING OF THE CEREMONIES.

When the white walls of that wondrous place closed on all of the crowd that could be admitted a choir of boys chanted a te deum, and amidst profound silence outside the church, as well as in it, the clergy, accompanied by acolytes bearing a cross and ewer of holy water, proceeded to receive the czarovitch. This scion of royalty, who was in the midst of the brilliant cortege, took a place at the right hand of the throne. When the imperial procession started it was made known to those inside the cathedral by renewed ringing of bells, by sonorous music from scores of bands, and by the shouts of those outside.

As the royal pair appeared at the doors of the palace the immense multitude immediately uncovered their heads, and burst into loud acclamations. Even women were there, and the enthusiasm was spontaneous and hearty.

At the head of the royal procession, which now entered the Kremlin, was the master of ceremonies, flanked by heralds richly clad and mounted upon pure white horses. It was of immense length, and comprised deputies from Asiatic states of the empire, students of universities, clergy, judges, nobility and prefects from every section of the empire.

MET BY THE EMPEROR.

When the front rank of the procession reached the palace it was met by the emperor, wearing the white uniform of a colonel of the imperial guards, and the empress, dressed in the Russian national costume, black velvet richly embroidered with diamonds, and girdled with a magnificent belt of precious stones. The empress leaned on the arm of her royal consort, and the pair placed themselves beneath a canopy richly wrought in silk and gold, and borne by thirty-two generals of high military rank. They then took their place near the head of the procession, being directly after the regalia. At this moment the entire body of clergy emerged from the cathedral, in order to meet the regalia, which they sprinkled with holy water and perfumed with incense. Upon entering the portals of the cathedral the emperor and empress were received by the metropolitan of Moscow and the metropolitans of Novgorod and Kieff, who presented them a cross to be kissed, and sprinkled with holy water first. The emperor and then the empress knelt before the sacred images which flanked the doors of the cathedral. They knelt and bowed their heads, after which they were conducted to the ancient thrones of ivory and silver. Alexander occupied the historical throne of Czar Vladimir Monomaque, while

THE EMPRESS

Was seated in an arm chair, gilded and crested with jewels. The thrones were placed on a dais erected between the two middle columns of the cathedral. Over the dais was a canopy of scarlet velvet, suspended from the arched roof, embroidered with gold and lined with silver brocade, which was marked with the arms of Russia and all her dependencies, and in the most ingenious manner. In front of the throne were two tables covered with gold cloth, upon which were placed the crowns, orb and scepter. None but foreign princes were accommodated with seats. Russian princes and dignitaries stood during the entire ceremony, according to the custom of the Greek church. The dignitaries of the realm carrying the standard and seals of the empire, took a stand upon the steps of the dais, after her majesty had been seated.

The metropolitan of Novgorod then asked the emperor, in a loud and distinct voice:

"Are you a true believer?"

The emperor, falling on his knees, read the reply in a clear voice, and the Lord's prayer and the apostles' creed of the Greek church, the metropolitan responding, "May the grace of the holy ghost remain with thee," descended from the dais.

THE BISHOP'S DECLARATION.

The following customary summons was then three times repeated by the bishop: "If there be any of you here present knowing any impediment for which Alexander, son of Alexander, should not be crowned, by the grace of God, emperor and autocrat of all the Russias, of Moscow, of Kieff, of Vladimir, of Novgorod, czar of Kazan, of Astrakhan, of Poland, of Siberia and of Kherson; [illegible] of [illegible], of [illegible] and of Pskoff; grand duke of Smolensk, of Lithuania, of Volhynia, of Podolia and of Finland; prince of Esthonia, of Livonia, of Courland and Semigalia, of the Samogitia, of Bielostok, of Corelia, of Tver, of Jugor, of Perm, of Katka, of Bulgaria and of other countries; master and grand duke of the lower countries in Novgorod, of Tchernigoff, of Riazan, of Polotsk, of Rostoff, of Jaroslaff, of Bieloserak, of Oudorsk, of Obdorsk, of Kondisk, of Vitebsk, of Mstislaff and of all the countries of the north; master absolute of Iversk, of Kartalinsk, of Kabardinsk and of the territory of Armenia; sovereign of Mountain and of Circassian princes; [illegible] of Turkestan, heir presumptive of Norway, and duke of Sleswick, of Holstein, of Stormarn, of Ditmarsh, and of Oldenburg, let him come forward in the name of the Holy Trinity and bear what the impediment is, or let him remain dumb forever."

Reading selections from the gospel the metropolitans of Novgorod and Kieff again ascended the dais, and invested the emperor with the imperial mantle of ermine, the metropolitan of Moscow saying at the same time: "Cover and protect thy people as this robe protects and covers thee."

THE EMPEROR'S RESPONSE.

The emperor responded, "I will, I will, I will, God helping."

The metropolitan of Novgorod, crossing his hands on the head of the emperor, then invoked the benediction of Almighty God upon him and his reign, and delivered to Alexander III. the crown of Russia, who placed it on his own head, and, assuming the scepter and orb, took his seat upon the throne. He then returned the insignia of his title to the dignitaries appointed to receive them, and called the empress, who knelt before him. He touched her head lightly with the crown of the emperor, and then formally crowned her with her own crown. The expression and silence of the empress as she knelt was one of sympathy with her royal husband, and touched deeply the audience.

The czar preserved throughout grave and decorous dignity.

THE CLOSING SCENES.

After the emperor had been duly invested with the imperial mantle and their majesties both seated on their thrones, the archdeacon intoned the imperial titles and sang Domine Salvum fac Imperatorem, which was taken up and thrice repeated by the choir. Directly this part of the ceremony was finished the bells in all the churches in Moscow rang out in chorus. A salute of 101 guns was fired, and inside the cathedral the members of the imperial family tendered their congratulations to their majesties. The emperor then knelt and recited a prayer, at the end of which the clergy and all knelt before the emperor, when the bishop of Moscow said aloud in behalf of the nation a fervent prayer for the happiness of their majesties.

Shouts of "Long live the emperor!" then rent the cathedral, and were taken up by the thousands outside, and carried from mouth to mouth until that part of the multitude who were unable to get inside the ample acreage of the Kremlin caught the sound and waved a huge volume of human gratulation to the remotest part of the city when it was speedily made known to all the world that another czar of the Russias had been crowned.

THE ROUTE TO THE CATHEDRAL.

Before their majesties left the palace the route to the cathedral was sprinkled with holy water. A heavy rain fell before their majesties started, but just as they took their places under the canopy the sun shone brilliantly. In the cathedral it was noticed that when the czar knelt alone to utter the prayer of intercession his eyes filled with tears, and he sobbed audibly as he read the prayer making a profession of faith.

The cathedral choir then sang a te deum, after which the emperor ungirded his sword, and accompanied by the empress and numerous dignitaries, proceeded to the gates of the sanctuary. There the metropolitan of Novgorod anointed the emperor's forehead, eyelids, nostrils and lips, ears and breast and hands, at the same time exclaiming, "Behold the seal of the Holy Ghost! May it keep thee ever holy." The empress was anointed only on the forehead. Both partook of the sacrament, and then left the cathedral, wearing their crowns and mantles, the emperor also bearing the scepter and orb.

THE RETURN TO THE PALACE.

After praying in the cathedral of Michael the Archangel their majesties returned to the palace, escorted by the procession, which presented even a more splendid sight than that which escorted them to the cathedral, being now augmented by the gorgeous state carriages of the imperial family. Banners were waved from all points in the Kremlin and the whole route of the procession fairly glowed with bright draperies and hangings.

The emperor re-entered the palace by the celebrated red staircase, whence laws were anciently promulgated. There he turned and saluted the people, who immediately uncovered their heads, cheering enthusiastically and blessing the czar.

IMPERIAL BANQUET.

The imperial banquet began at 3:30 P. M. in the hall called "Grano Vitaia Palata." This hall was especially reserved for the occasion, and was splendidly decorated with cloth of gold. The emperor and empress, wearing their crowns, sat at separate tables on thrones of unequal hight. Their majesties were served by distinguished nobles, acting as cup-bearers, carvers etc. The first toast was "His Majesty, the Emperor," which was followed by a salute of sixty-one guns; the next was "Her Majesty, the Empress," followed by fifty-one guns; the third was "The Imperial Household," followed by thirty-one guns and the fourth was the "clergy and all faithful inhabitants," followed by twenty-one guns.

The foreign princes and diplomats present stood during the first course, and afterward, in accordance with the ancient custom withdrew to a separate repast.

Northwest Lumber Coming to the Front.

SAN FRANCISCO, May 27.—[Special.]—It is understood from private sources that the negotiations announced some time ago for the purpose of extending trade in northwest lumber are about completed, and that in a few days a large order for Washington territory fir will be filled here, to be used in car building. Fir is recently made to this market by agents of eastern houses appear to have been highly satisfactory from a business stand point. The impression prevails that the next few months will witness a material increase in the field, and that an extended trade will be carried on in certain kinds of lumber which can be profitably substituted for hard wood, and which are also used for finishing purposes. A prominent lumber firm has entered into correspondence with dealers east, with a view to testing the market there with shipments of northern lumber, and from the general tenor of enquiries made it is believed that it will result in establishing an independent trade.

STOCKTON, May 27.—J. J. Evans, a Mexican veteran and pioneer is missing, and it is believed that he has drowned himself in Stockton slough. He was seen last night at 10 o'clock, and this morning his bank book, papers, letters and $57 50 were found under a water spout on the premises of Judge Paterson. A pistol shot was heard at midnight on the slough near Judge Paterson's residence. He had a pistol when he left home. Of late he has been demented and has threatened to kill himself. For many years he was deputy sheriff and special officer in Chinatown. Men have been dragging the slough all afternoon, but without success.

Big Fire at Bakersfield.

BAKERSFIELD, May 27.—Fire broke out to-night through the explosion of a kerosene lamp, destroying $20,000 worth of property. The town has been so singularly free from fire that the department has become disorganized, and twenty minutes elapsed before an engine was on the ground. The buildings destroyed were the upper part of a brick house, Coon's building, in which was Wells, Fargo & Co.'s express office, Shaffman's saloon, Smith & Faugh's grocery store, and several other similar buildings.

Another Victim Found.

PETALUMA, May 27.—Jack Blackwell was found in the bay, 1800 feet below the Pilot wreck, with $80 10 on his person. One leg and his neck were broken.

WASHINGTON TERRITORY.

An Injured Husband Vindicates his Honor.

WALLA WALLA, May 27.—[Special.]—Saturday night Johnny Montague shot a man named Weiser through the body. For some time Montague's wife has been on the town, and the husband felt badly in consequence. He caught the two together, and with pistol in each hand marched them both up town to his saloon, in order to see them clearly. Having a clear view of Weiser he said, "It is you, is it?" and fired, the bullet going through the body. He then endeavored to shoot his wife, but a looker-on pushed him over. He was finally arrested, but nothing will probably be done with him as the wound is not necessarily fatal, and he is looked upon as a long suffering man, and the feeling in this community is that every man has his own honor in his own keeping.

Walla Walla Notes.

Crops are looking really wonderful, and nothing can prevent the biggest crop on record.

Memorial services by the G. A. R. took place to-day, in the presence of a large crowd. Rev. Mr. Mathrop and John B. Allen made the addresses, which were very appropriate. Lincoln Post was escorted to and from the hall by Columbia Lodge, K. of P., in full uniform.

Theophile Denuvion, a pioneer French merchant, died to-day.

The fruit crop promises large results.

Fatally Shot While Resisting a Police Officer.

SEATTLE, May 27.—[Special.]—In attempting to arrest Michael O'Neil at 12:30 this morning, for disturbing the peace, Peter Brunn, police officer, was violently resisted. Brunn drew his club, but O'Neil being the bigger and stronger man of the two took it away from him, and beat him with it over the head, hurting him sadly. In self-defense Brunn, while held down and beaten, drew his revolver and shot O'Neil in the neck, inflicting a wound supposed to be fatal.

FAN GAME RAIDED

A Chinese gambling house situated on the corner of Second and Alder streets, in which is carried on the seductive game of "Cha fon tan," was raided by the police last night. Twelve Chinamen were found intently wagering their hard-earned coin and were herded together and driven down to the jail. The place raided is exactly opposite the one which furnished forty-four gambling cases for the grand jury out of which number only two were convicted. If no better result is taken this time the penitentiary will get no victim except it be that one of the Mongolians is cut up into parts. However, it is claimed that better evidence can be brought against these gamblers who are just arrested. All gave bail for their appearance before Judge Morrland for examination to-morrow. Policemen Hudson, Dibbins, Lyons, James and Ward participated in the raid

A CHINESE SOCIETY

There has been recently organized in our city a society composed of the better class of Chinese merchants and business men known by the name of the Portland Reform and Benevolent Union. Its avowed object is to suppress gambling, lotteries, houses of ill fame and other violations of the law in the city of Portland. It consists now of about forty members and is constantly increasing, and is organized by a full set of officers consisting of a president, secretary and treasurer, with other subordinate officers. As the name imparts the object of the society is to suppress gambling, lotteries and houses of ill fame. They intend to and the officers of the law to exterminate as far as possible these and other violations of the laws of the country where they reside. The society ought to be a power if properly used to close out Chinese gambling houses, lotteries and other dens of infamy in our midst. The purposes of this society are sufficiently broad to cover opium joints as one of the vices peculiar to the lower classes of Chinese

DASTARDLY OUTRAGE

Thos Huntington, the well known plasterer, while going out to his farm near the Sandy on Friday afternoon became involved in a quarrel with a party of men working on the road under Supervisor Simmons. The accounts given of the affair are different, but as several suits have commenced it is likely the truth will come out. It appears that Huntington was driving [illegible] where the men were at work when one of them lifted up the end of a plank and tipped the dog cart so much that a child which was in it with Huntington and his wife fell over the dashboard upon the shaft. Huntington stopped and an altercation ensued in which he was vilely abused. He wanted to know what they used him so, and was told if he would come back they would tell him. He went back and was set upon by seven or eight men and beaten and kicked till he was unconscious. He was then put in the cart and Mrs Huntington drove him home. There can be no excuse for such a cowardly and outrageous proceeding. Complaint was made against Huntington in Justice Greene's court [illegible] was unable to be present yesterday

[illegible] IN GEOGRAPHY

[illegible] ALARM

The fire alarm [illegible] a panic [illegible] in New Market theater from trivial causes yesterday afternoon. The auditorium contained about 700 persons of whom nearly five-sixths were women and children. Shortly after the first tap of the bell some one yelled "fire" [illegible] and [illegible] Of course all rose to their feet and many made a rush for the [illegible] of the crowd and assured them that there was no danger. Policeman Brannan [illegible] stairs shouting. The fire is three blocks away. This was carried back and when all knew that it was over most of the auditors returned to their seats and the play proceeded. No one was injured

POLICE COURT

J H Demerest was arraigned yesterday on a charge of stealing a baby buggy. The second hand dealer to whom he sold it testified that he came to him and said that his baby was dead and that his wife had a swelled neck and would not look at the buggy any more. Demerest smiled at this statement but his jaw dropped when the judge sentenced him to twenty five days in jail

F F McGraw alias "Billy Goat," an ex-convict who is well known to the police, was arraigned on charges of assaulting ex Police Officer Martin and Captain Gritzmacker. It seems that Martin vagged McGraw about four years ago. The latter meeting Martin on the street yesterday assaulted and beat him. After he was landed in jail he assaulted Capt. Gritzmacker. He was very fresh when arraigned, and attempted to make a set speech. When questioned by Mr Mulkey he said that owing to the disarrangement of his shirt collar his appearance was not calculated to command respect, but if they would allow him to go out and get a clean shirt he would give a display of forensic ability. He wished to go back some years in his history, but the judge told him that the court did not take cognizance of anything that happened before the stone age. The matter was settled by McGraw going to jail for twenty five days on each charge

The parties implicated in disposing of the effects of Albert M Brown were arraigned. On motion of Mr Mulkey the case was continued till Monday and bail fixed at $1000

THE EAST SIDE.

THE SANDY ROAD MELEE

The case against Frank Wilson for assault and battery on Tom Huntington which was set for hearing in Justice Bullock's court yesterday afternoon was called according to appointment but had to be postponed through the injuries of the prosecuting witness preventing his presence. The time for hearing was changed to Tuesday next. This was the case growing out of the altercation on the Sandy road and Mrs Huntington, who was with her husband at the time has now made complaint against Supervisor Simmons for assault and battery upon her

The Nashville Fair

NASHVILLE, Tenn, May 2[illegible] — The attendance at the fair grounds this afternoon is the largest ever known in this city and is estimated in the neighborhood of twenty thousand people. After dinner [illegible] the [illegible] distance [illegible] artillery [illegible] followed by a [illegible] parade [illegible] participated [illegible] all [illegible] troops [illegible] Battle of [illegible] Butler of the Missouri National Guards commanded the defending forces. The battle was fought over the entire enclosure of the fair grounds covering an area of one mile. The forces consisting of infantry, artillery and cavalry. The attacking party was victorious and drove a portion of the defenders back into the drill ground where the batteries were captured at the point of the bayonet. The firing heard in the city recalled vividly recollections of the historic battle of Nashville and had a familiar and not over-pleasant sound to the volunteers of both sections. Only one accident occurred in the slight wounding of William Walsh of the Treadway rifles by the wadding from a field piece as he with others was discharging the battery. He was knocked senseless but recovered in a short time and is all right again. The exercises of the day concluded with a brilliant pyrotechnic display in the old academy grounds in the western portion of the city. The drill concludes to-morrow when the names of the victorious companies will be announced and premiums awarded

The Report of Crook's Murder Discredited

CHICAGO, May 26 — Officers at General Sheridan's headquarters while in receipt of no direct news nevertheless place no credence in the sensational telegrams intimating a mutiny in General Crook's command and the death of the American officer in person. They place less reliance in the report than if it was to the effect that his column had met defeat at the hands of the hostiles. There has been nothing upon which to base a belief in the recital from any former act of treachery on the part of his Indian allies and the presence of American cavalry they deem adds to the unlikelihood of such an occurrence. They also put but slight belief in the statement of his supposed engagement with savages as they argue that Crook would have pushed through his own courier rapidly in such an event.

Not Intended for General Publication

MILWAUKEE, May 26 — S H Seamans, secretary of the Millers National Association, was flooded with telegrams to-day inquiring if his report on the wheat crop which was made for the benefit of the millers association had been correctly sent out by the associated press. Mr Seamans says the report was meant for members of the association only and not for publication. He calls attention to the fact that his estimate is based on reports from twenty one states only and says if the crop of the whole country was taken into consideration the total yield must be 485,000,000 bushels while his estimate on twenty one states is only 373,500,000. The information published yesterday was a recapitulation of a page cut from the printed report

The [illegible] on the French Chinese Troubles

NEW YORK, May 26 — [illegible] editorial on the French Chinese troubles: French war vessels in the Chinese seas and troops which may be forwarded from colonial establishments will bring the body available for [illegible] to 500 men. This army sent France could forward by the Suez canal strong reinforcements to Tonquin long before Chinese soldiery would cross the border to Yunnan. As for Chinese ironclads, we do not apprehend trouble to a French armed vessel but while France would almost certainly come forth victor success would require much greater expenditure of money and a far larger display of military force than seem to have entered into the French ministry's calculations

Quarter Centennial Celebration

PITTSBURG, May 26 — The quarter centennial celebration of the formation of the United Presbyterian church was held in the Second United Presbyterian church at Allegheny City to-day. Two thousand people were in the body of the church. The church edifice was emblazoned with mottoes significant of the occasion. Moderator McMahon introduced J J Cooper as presiding officer. Addresses were made by Dr Kerr, Rev A Wallace, Rev W J Kane and Rev N S McMillion on the progress made by the church and recounting memorable incidents in its history

Sitting Bull's Baptism

CINCINNATI, May 26 — Mr H A Farney, an artist who has been doing illustrations of Indian life for Harper's, was anxious to be present at the baptism of Sitting Bull in the Catholic church if it should occur. He telegraphed an inquiry to Dakota and to-night received the following from the Indian agent: Fort Yates, Dakota — The reported baptism of Sitting Bull is erroneous. There is no immediate prospect of such ceremony so far as I am aware of

A Modern Romance

MONTREAL, May 26 — Some years ago W H Smith, manager of the Merchants bank of Sarnia, Ont, absconded with $32,000 which the Citizens' Guarantee Company had to pay. THE OREGON SHORT LINE.

It will not Terminate at Burnt River, but will Push Through to the Coast.

CHICAGO, May 26 — The Times says it is announced that an agreement has been entered into between the Union Pacific and the Northern Pacific railways, under which territory west of the Snake river in Oregon, Washington and northern Idaho should be regarded as belonging to the Northern Pacific, or the Villard combination, and all east of the Snake river should belong to the Union Pacific, or the Gould combination. The agreement is understood to contain further stipulations in reference to joint occupancy of the territory of Montana. Under the agreement the public are given to understand that the extension of the Union Pacific, known as the Oregon Short Line, was to terminate at Burnt river, and the

BAKER CITY BRANCH

Of the Oregon Railway & Navigation Company was to terminate at the same place, where a junction would be formed. It transpires that little or no regard is being paid to the alleged agreement. It is said the Oregon Short Line is expending thousands of dollars in surveys and location of a line beyond the point where it was understood to have agreed to stop. The impression is growing that Villard has been giving the Union Pacific people a wild goose chase, and is putting his forces in the field to occupy territory east of the Snake river, and to take in Boise City upon the invitation of its citizens, who are anxious to have a competing line. Many do not believe the road will be built 400 miles

THROUGH A DESERT COUNTRY

And then stop 400 miles short of the Pacific coast, at the very threshold of a section that would furnish the very best of local traffic. For this reason they favor the extension of the Northern Pacific, and a gentleman from the extreme northwest said to a reporter: give the western outlet an opportunity [illegible] constant through a country where it is [illegible]

ing taken up claims after the disbandment of the Hudson Bay Company, of which they were employees. Most of them married squaws, and their children are strong and active and some very intelligent. Before leaving Chewelah the party returned to the entrance into the valley to inspect an Indian burying ground, which we had passed in coming in, but on account of a heavy rainfall did not stop. It is about fifty feet square, neatly inclosed with a picket fence, painted white, and each grave is ornamented both after the Indian and civilized fashions. Over every grave a little hut, on whose rafters many articles belonging to the deceased during life, are placed. Each grave is finished in a little mound, at one end of which a nicely painted board gives the name and date of death of the deceased while at the other end stands a crucifix, which is carved by a relative or friend of the dead. Directly over the cross is a little triangular shaped flag bearing a Latin inscription; but the education of the undersigned was neglected in this particular study, and he was satisfied with taking the word of the Minnesotian who felt confident that the inscription was Latin, but could not translate it. Upon our return to Chewelah, we were joined by Mr. O'Neill, who accompanied us several miles on our journey. When about four miles out, at the ranch of Peter King, side by side, not more than six feet apart were two large springs, one highly impregnated with iron, while the other was so strong with sulphur as to make it nauseous. A phial of water from the sulphur spring has been sent to a chemist in Portland for analysis, as it is supposed to contain other mineral properties along with the sulphur. It seems strange that the springs, while so close together and with apparently not even a strata of rock between them, should be so differently impregnated.

MATTER ALTOGETHER EXTRANEOUS.

From this point to our stopping place at noon was but a short distance, so that we jogged along at a lazy pace, and a conversation was started concerning our horses and their relative merits. I asked the Spokan man why he called his horse Henry Villard, and he answered, because he was always haunted with a fear that the animal would stumble and fall before reaching his goal, the Columbia river. The Minnesotian had named his horse Windom, in honor of the last unsuccessful candidate for the senate from his native state, and gave for his reasons, that no difference how poor a lot of stock (referring to my noble cayuse) was put against him for a race, he invariably got left. He also said that he firmly believed if the ex-senator tried to gain his desire with nothing entered against him, he would either drop dead, or stop on the road to interfere in some petty local affair, but certainly would never get there. I had dubbed my little mare Ophelia, because of her gentle, confiding disposition and sweet ways. At one time on the journey she was so affectionate that while on a rapid galop she stopped short to turn her head toward me in the saddle and be petted. She, however, was sorely disappointed, for, although she stopped very suddenly and with apparent ease, I seemed to have some business ahead and sat down in the middle of the road to transact it.

TOWARDS COLVILLE.

Arriving at our stopping place at noon we were agreeably surprised to find a very nicely furnished farm, owned by Jasper Roberts. He told us he had been there twenty-two years and had 100 acres under cultivation. His farm is well stocked with latest improved machinery, and its general appearance brings an eastern farm into one's mind. He has quite a herd of cattle and horses, but only a few sheep. When asked whether it did not pay to raise wool, he stated there ought to be more money in it than anything else on a farm, but on account of the great number of coyotes in the valley, unless the sheep were very carefully herded at all times, they would be carried off—so many as ten in one night—and that his market was so far from home that it did not pay to hire herders and go to the expense of hauling. His nearest postoffice is Chewelah.

OPPENHEIMER'S MILL.

We left this pleasant little stopping place about 2 o'clock, and, after two hours riding, arrived at Oppenheimer's flouring mill, of which we had heard every one in the valley speak, and which even the Chicago (?) of the Pacific coast, Spokane Falls, gives credit with turning out better flour than can be purchased in Walla Walla. It is a quaint looking old building, made principally of logs, and stands in a little corner against the mountain on the bank of the Calispell river. Going inside, the first thing that attracts one's attention is the total absence of that creaking noise and jarring peculiar to all other mills. Not a single piece of iron shafting, no pulleys, connecting rods or gearing of any kind can be seen. Everything is made of wood. The shafts and pulleys are large, cumbrous-looking things, but run easily and without the least noise, and, with an old Turbine water wheel, were all made by hand, from timber cut on the hillside. Even one of the mill-stones was taken from a bed of granite on the neighboring hill. It has a capacity of about thirty barrels per day, although it is seldom called upon to turn out that amount. D. H. Ferguson & Co. first built the mill in 1857 and run it until about two years ago. From the miller's estimate there was about 20,000 bushels of wheat raised in the valley last year, and he thinks this year's crop will be at least double that. Not only on account of new farms having been taken up, but all the old farmers have fenced new land this season and are cultivating it as rapidly as possible. The Calispell river, which furnishes power for the mill, takes its origin in Calispell lake, sometimes known as the little Pend d'Oreille lake, and empties in the Colville river a few miles below the mill. It has never been known to fail, and, as a rule, furnishes too much water, which goes to waste over the flood gates. This stream, from a few miles above the mill up to its source, is a fisherman's perfect paradise, swarming with both lake and brook trout.

After leaving the mill the road leads on through a rather pretty country to the new town of Colville. This realization of the ideas of a man named Steel, consists of a brewery, a store and two or three residences. It is situated on a little plat, and has none but the old Colville road running into it. Before entering the town we passed through some overflowed land on which several head of horses were turned out, and the Minnesotian made the rather amusing remark that he did not go much on a country where horses had to dive for grass. From the new town to Fort Colville proper is about four miles, the two places being divided by a range of hills. The fort is entirely deserted by the military, but one building now being occupied, and that by Mr. J. Stitzel, clerk of the Stevens county court, and who, by the way, is an old resident of Portland. We spent the night with him and were treated very hospitably. He has a fine ranch a few miles from the fort, and seems perfectly contented.

A DISCIPLE OF HENRY BERGH

At this place a little incident occurred which is worth mentioning, and goes plainly to prove that a cayuse has no more feeling for a human being than an Apache Indian. When about to retire for the night, our companion from Spokane Falls, who, by the way, is a nice, well-behaved, Sunday school sort of a man, went into the field where our horses were securely hobbled, and grazing in peace and quiet. Seeing their helpless condition, with two feet tied together, his heart softened toward them and he took off all the hobbles. Coming in the house where the Minnesotian was punishing us with a story about a blizzard which blew an iron pump and thirty-five feet of pipe out of the ground, the Spokanian entered and blushingly told us of his generous action. The Minnesotian looked up while his face began to lengthen, and with a heart-rending look of disgust spread all over it, remarked to the Spokanian: "You are the best traveling companion I ever saw in my life. If I could find another match for you I would have you made into sleeve-buttons, and could then keep you with me all the time." The Spokanian, thinking he had been highly complimented, smiled blandly as he passed into his bedroom, remarking something about dumb brutes and religion, which, however, fell flat. The poor Minnesotian took his medicine very hard, and during the entire night could be heard muttering about some camphool, cussed idiot, etc. The following morning we sent the Spokanian out to drive in the horses and he did—along about 7 o'clock that evening. He looked so weary and dejected that we took pity on him and told him how while he was gone, we went fishing and played seven-up; had a front dinner, and toasted our shins before the fireplace in the afternoon while it rained so hard etc. He did not seem however, to take much interest in our sport, but after swallowing a hasty supper (and hobbling every cussed one of the cayuses) he retired to his bed a sadder and wiser Spokan Falls speculator.

COLVILLE.

The following morning we proceeded on our journey towards old Fort Colville, which is about sixteen miles from the military post. We took the trail across the mountains, which of course was rough, but very picturesque and lying through the timber, we were shaded from the scorching sun. Mr. Stitzel had told us that the view from the mountain down on the Columbia was very pretty, but we were in no way prepared for the grand spectacle that lay before us when we reached the edge of the mountain and looked down upon the river and beautiful little valley. We were probably 1000 feet above and a quarter of a mile distant from the Columbia, and the picture spread before us requires for description an abler pen than mine. From the foot of the mountain to the river the land was most all under cultivation, and from our elevation each farm looked like a beautiful garden spot—all green and glowing, while the long lines of fence and huts and outbuildings with their more sober hue, with the majestic river moving along on one side and stately mountains surrounding it on all others, as if placed there to protect it, the little valley seemed a fairy land. After descending into the valley by a winding and rather perilous trail a ride of about three miles brought us to the river at the old English boundary commission's fort, where we stopped with Mr. W. V. Brown, who has a trading post there. He has been in the valley about twenty years and has almost the same comforts at his place that one would find in an old and well settled country. We crossed the river in a canoe the same evening to take a look at the old Colville reservation. This is almost entirely deserted, the Indians for the greater part having taken up farms among the whites away from the land set out for them by the government.

A SETTLER'S VIEW OF MOSES.

Upon our return to Mr. Brown's in the evening, he explained very intelligently the Moses' trouble with the government, and said his sentiments had been echoed by everyone who spoke about it in the whole valley. Mr. Brown states that in the first place Moses misrepresented while in Washington that he had control over 1000 warriors, and got the reservation containing 3600 square miles of some of the best land in the territory by promising to prevent them from taking part against the whites in the Nez Perces war. He has not by actual count fifty warriors and will not be recognized by any of the Indians as a chief. He has never lived on the reservation and is acting "the dog in the manger," and will allow no one else to live there. Two miners who were working a claim on this land which they took up long before it was set aside for a reservation, have been ordered off by both the government and Moses, but refused to leave. The government then took that part occupied by the miners away from Moses, who wants $10,000 for it. That is about the story as Mr. Brown told it, and he laughs at the idea of there being any chance for trouble coming from it. To use his own expression, "Moses cannot raise enough men to take a ranch away from one able-bodied man."

TRANSPORTATION AND EDUCATIONAL AFFAIRS.

The same evening we met Captain Pingstone, who was captain of the old '49 which ran from Kettle falls up the river from 1865 until 1876. He says that the greatest impediment to navigation above Kettle falls is the Little Dalles, which are about twenty-five miles distant and navigable nine months in the year. He thinks the boats will again be put on the river, within a short time, to run in connection with the Canadian Pacific and Kootenai railroads. The old fort, at which Mr. Brown stays, was built by the British boundary commission in 1861 and occupied two winters. The buildings are still in fair condition and are made exclusively of logs. The old Hudson Bay fort is about a half mile down the river, and is almost entirely ruined by time. It was built in 1833 and occupied until 1870. Alongside this fort is an old Jesuit mission, which was established in 1835 and abandoned in 1860, when a new one was built further up the valley and midway between the Hudson Bay and military fort. It is conducted under the supervision of Father Carnan, and is well attended. He has about fifty Indian and half-breed girls under tuition, also about half that number of boys, for whose education the government annually donates $3000. Several white children are also in attendance there, and are charged $6 per month, which includes board and lodging. A district school is in session, and has an average attendance of about sixteen. Almost the entire mouth of the valley is under cultivation, and the farmers, with those of the entire valley from Sheep creek up, are anxiously awaiting the time when a railroad will be run through their country and carry their produce to a seasonable market.

THE NICKERSON SCANDAL.

The Divorce Obtained by False Swearing—The Wife's Story.

(Washington Letter May 12.)

The last of April a brief mention appeared in the Times of the fact that three days after obtaining a divorce in Philadelphia from his wife, who was in Europe, as she had been for three years, Major Azor H. Nickerson, assistant adjutant-general U. S. A., had married Miss Carter in Baltimore. As stated then, the affair was regarded as very mysterious save by his friends, especially those who had known his first wife. Within a few days light has been thrown upon the matter by the friends and relatives of his divorced wife who has recently returned from Europe with her only child, a daughter 11 years old, and it is now rumored that the divorce was obtained in such wise that it will be the subject of investigation by military as well as civil courts. Indignation is expressed by the friends of his first wife, who is the niece of the historian Bancroft of California. Her mother also lives there.

The story, as told by her friends who have heard from her, is that she knew nothing of the proceedings for the divorce, or of its being granted, until her relatives, hearing of his marriage, telegraphed the news to her and sent her money to come home. Believing her husband true to her and unconscious of any cause he had to seek to annul their marriage, Mrs. Nickerson had begged from the first year of her stay in Europe, where she was lonely and discontented, to be allowed to return, but her requests, at first refused for reasons that she thought indicated pecuniary embarrassment on her husband's part and excited in her no suspicion, at last were wholly ignored, and for a year before the divorce was obtained he did not write to her at all, but the small allowance he made her and their child was sent to the latter regularly without a word to the mother. Then, knowing something serious was the matter, she began writing to relatives to inquire about him, and at last was forced to ask her mother to send her the means to return. Meantime stories to her husband's interest were circulated saying that she had abandoned him and remained in Europe from preference. It is flatly to contradict this false rumor, in justice to her, that her friends in Washington are now telling what they believe to be the facts in the case.

It is said that in getting the divorce in Philadelphia, notwithstanding the fact that she wrote to him regularly and that he had sent her money regularly, Major Nickerson swore that she had deserted him and that he did not even know where she was.

Royalty and Freemasonry.

It is well known that Frederick the Great was a warm friend of the order of Free Masons, and himself one of its members. In proof thereof there exists a letter of his, just now unearthed by German newspapers, which he wrote on February 7, 1778, to two Dominican and Capuchin priests of Aix-la-Chapelle, who had incited the mob against the Masonic lodge then re-established in that city. In this letter he said: "Various reports, confirmed by the public papers, have informed me with what zeal you, very reverend fathers, forge the sword of fanaticism against the peaceable, virtuous, and estimable people called Free Masons. As a former dignitary of that order I must, as far as lies in my power, repel the calumny which attacks it, and lift the dark veil covering the temple we have erected to every virtue, and which you consider the resort of every vice. What, my very reverend fathers, would you recall those centuries of ignorance and fanaticism which so long disgraced human reason? * * * You not only call the Masons sorcerers, but you accuse them of being rogues, precursors of the anti-Christ, and you exhort an entire people to exterminate the accursed brood. Rogues, my very reverend fathers, do not, like ourselves, make it a duty to assist the poor and the orphaned. Rogues on the contrary rob them, and fatten on their prey in idleness and hypocrisy."

As a companion picture to the foregoing, the following will be of interest to the craft: The crown prince of Germany is an earnest Free Mason and recently delivered an address before the Royal York Lodge in Berlin, which caused a great sensation and drew forth much comment. The burden of its remarks was that Free Masons should be more progressive and that instead of clinging to old traditions, whose only importance is their antiquity, they should distinguish themselves by being in the foremost rank of seekers after new and living truths.

I have been [illegible] treated for [illegible] I was very miserable and completely worn out and discouraged. I had [illegible] to the [illegible] the very strength to render existence desirable, having failed to find relief from any of the doctor's prescriptions. At last trying [illegible] a friend persuaded me to [illegible] a bottle of Hunt's Remedy, and now I rejoice that I followed this friendly advice, for the Remedy acted like a charm in my case. After I had taken a few doses my health began to improve; I felt better every day. The fluttering of the heart, the intense backache and terrible shortness of the breath disappeared; my strength and ambition returned, and before I had taken two bottles of the Remedy I was entirely well, and able to wash and iron and do my housework. Once in a while I am troubled with the headache, and as soon as I am taken I resort to Hunt's Remedy, and a few doses fix me all right. I shall not be without it in the future. I have frequently recommended the Hunt's Remedy to my friends, and they have experienced relief from the first dose. I heartily recommend it to all afflicted with Kidney disease or diseases of the Liver, Bladder, or Urinary organs. I think no family should be without it.

MONDAY MORNING MAY 28 1883

RELIGIOUS TOLERATION

The early mails have just brought the speech of Mr Gladstone on the Affirmation bill delivered in the house of commons a month ago. Seldom has the great Englishman done himself, his party and his country a ll er ser[illegible] than in his course on the great question involved in the bill under discussion — the question of permitting a member elect of the house of commons to make affirmation of his loyalty instead of taking an oath of office. The great power of the speech is due to the fact that the speaker deals almost wholly with the general and high principles involved in the question at issue in the manner of a man swayed by great motives, and unabashed by fixed principles, devoted to liberal aims. It is a speech which soars above the occasion and is profitable for instruction beyond the partisan audience and the present time.

The bill failed by three votes as the telegraph reported at the time but it was due more to the fact that the infamous Bradlaugh would benefit by it than to failure to see and appreciate the great principles set forth by Mr Gladstone. During debate the conservatives who of course approved the measure endeavored to fix upon the liberal party the odium of a personal interest in Mr Bradlaugh's fortunes although knowing perfectly well that between a devoted churchman like Mr Gladstone and an infidel of the Bradlaugh type there could not be any sympathy. In the course of his speech Mr Gladstone read a letter from the secretary of the three denominations of dissenters who for warding a petition of that body in favor of the bill. This letter said: "The personal associations which are at present connected with the question are so painful and offensive to the body which we represent, that nothing but a strong sense of duty would have induced them to sign this petition to Parliament." Then addressing the conservatives, Mr Gladstone said:

> Do you suppose that we feel no pain? Do you suppose that we are unaware how difficult, how all but impracticable, it has become to do what we believe to be strict justice in the face of such associations? If you do not, you ought to; and if you do, you should not, from your place in this house, sarcastically deride us and advise us to inscribe on our banner, "Bradlaugh and Blasphemy." I believe that every one of those intending to vote for this bill feels that it is indeed difficult to do justice under such circumstances, but the difficulty is the measure of the duty and of the honor; and, just as if we were in a jury box and a criminal stood before us on a criminal charge, we will put a strong hand of self-restraint upon ourselves and we will take care that full justice, nothing more and nothing less, shall be awarded to any citizen of England.

Great numbers of petitions for and against the passage of the bill had been addressed to Parliament, and speaking of these, and admitting that the signers of petitions against the bill were several times greater in number than the signers of petitions for it, he said: "If I were to make an exception to the general practice of the instinct of the people — and it is an exception not dishonorable to them — I say I would trust them far more in questions where their own immediate interests are concerned than in a question where the prepossessions of religion are concerned." Continuing he said: "I am convinced that on every religious ground, as well as every political ground, the true and the wise course is not to deal out religious liberty by halves, quarters and fractions, but to deal it out entire and make no distinctions between man and man on the ground of religious differences from one end of the land to the other."

The disadvantages suffered by the liberal party in this controversy and in other and similar controversies for principle's sake, are admitted and recounted. "But," he said, "there is no greater honor to a man than to suffer for the sake of what he thinks to be righteous, and there is no greater honor to a party than to suffer in the endeavor to give effect to principles which they believe to be just." And in concluding he finally said:

> I have no fear of theism in this house. Religion is the expression of the divine mind, and, however little our feeble vision may be able to discern the means by which God may provide for its preservation, we may leave the matter in his hands, and we may be sure that a firm and courageous application of every principle of justice is the best way for the preservation and maintenance of religion. [Cheers.] And I am painfully roused my opinion that grave injury has been done to religion in many minds — not in instructed minds, but in those which are ill-constructed or partially instructed — in consequence of things which ought never to have occurred. [Opposition cheers.] Great mischief has been done in many minds by a resistance offered to the man elected by the constituency of Northampton which a portion of the people believe to be unjust. When they see the profession of religion and the interests of religion ostensibly associated with what they are deeply convinced is injustice, it tends to [illegible] about religion itself [illegible] and in impairing those convictions and that belief the loss of which I believe to be the most inexpressible calamity which can fall either upon a man or upon a nation. [Loud cheers.]

We would gladly print the speech entire, which occupies several columns of the London Telegraph, but it is impracticable. It is full of the loftiest patriotism and the most advanced theories of religious tolerance yet not in the smallest degree admits that progress has crowded upon the principles or customs of true religion.

Yellow fever has appeared at Havana and there is, of course, imminent danger that it will reach our southern ports. The national board of health will use every possible precaution to keep it out but with constant communication contagion is practically unavoidable. It is thought, however that the south will never again be scourged with it as it was only a few years ago. The southern cities learned a lesson then in cleanliness which will save them from general misfortune.

Governor Moody has announced a series of military appointments which a thousand miles from Oregon may appear matter of great importance. These appointments in spite of their big names are merely nominal and involve the recipients in no duty and reward them with nothing more substantial than empty titles which it is considered rather a joke than otherwise to apply. Still, a military appointment from the governor is a high personal and political compliment.

On the 13th inst Postmaster General Gresham issued an order that the abbreviation "Oreg" for Oregon be no longer used in the postal department and that the name of the state be hereafter spelled out in full. This doubtless is a result of Judge Deady's criticism upon the unnatural abbreviation "Oreg" reprinted in THE OREGONIAN several weeks ago from a St Louis law journal.

Of course all talk a year ahead of time is merest speculation and guesswork and there is but little probability that John A Logan will be the republican presidential candidate. Somebody too wittily remarked that if Logan should be elected next Mrs Logan would be one of the best presidents the country ever had.

THE ASTORIA LAND GRANT

Everybody knows in a general way that the Astoria land grant is great in area and value though but little is definitely known of it by the public at large. The original grant was 1,100,800 acres of which 780,000 acres have been earned by the building of the west side branch of the Oregon & California railroad at length full of the magnificent grant for the building of the line from Forest Grove to Astoria. Writing of this subject in the Commercial Herald of last week Dr [illegible] Lindsay says: "Beginning at Astoria due west it takes in all the odd sections of lands on the north and east side of the Columbia river for from six to ten miles north of the Columbia river up as far as Lost land. Beside taking in all of Clatsop and the major part of Tillamook is included. It includes the [illegible] back of Columbia City and both on that point and the Nehalem and as fine and fine bodies of timber as may be found anywhere in the world. It is estimated that in any single section of 640 acres each will yield over 60,000,000 feet of merchantable logs. This grant includes the overlapping grant or the grant which lies between the Northern Pacific and Astoria and which was decided to belong to the Astoria grant by the secretary of the interior in 1870." The value of this great empire is suggestive of the efforts that citizens of Astoria have made to have it placed where it belongs. Without discussing the wisdom of the government in making such a valuable territory over to a corporation for the building of a road which would not cost as much as the land was actually worth at the time the present purpose of the people t[illegible] point to the fact that the time given to the company to build the road expired in 1876 and it is very [illegible] and certain that unless positive and practical assurance is given that the road will be built speedily by the companies now controlling this great grant before the next congress adjourns the lands will be placed in such status as to be of the greatest good to the greatest number and the European trustees will be relieved from any further trouble about the matter.

Only a few weeks ago a young man was shot dead in that outpost of hell on Second street known as the Palace theater. And now another crime with terrible results is to be laid at its door. A young man under twenty years of age with his pockets full of his employer's money dropped into the Palace one evening several weeks ago and after a night's debauch woke up without a cent. He tried to make up the sum lost by borrowing and failing in that, by theft, and in this was detected. The case is sadder because the youth is the only son and main support of a fond mother whose heart is wrung with bitterest sorrow for her boy's sin and shame. And the Palace theater, in which Charles Swarz was killed and in which Percy Witherell has been led to ruin is permitted to publicly employ all possible arts to attract other victims, and there are those in the community who demand for it cheap license. And the proprietors of this den are actively interested in the free whisky league.

The Prince of Wales, so the telegraph says, is anxious to bestow knighthood upon Henry Irving, but the queen hesitates as the honor has never been bestowed upon an actor. Under the patronage of the Prince of Wales and several other members of the royal family, the stage is being greatly elevated socially. Many actors both ladies and gentlemen are now received in the most aristocratic circles of England.

A Walla Walla man so a dispatch says has "vindicated his honor" by shooting his wife's paramour and then attempting to shoot her. Just how it helps a man's honor to commit an atrocious crime we fail to see clearly.

LELAND STANFORD

The Ex-Governor Becomes Quite Communicative to a "Tribune" Reporter and Unburdens his Plans and Opinions.

NEW YORK May 26 — [Special] — The Tribune has the following: Ex-Governor Leland Stanford with his family sail for Europe to-day, on the Germanic. He is much improved in health after his sickness of several weeks and save for a little pain in the chest suffers but little from the neuralgic pains which some time ago visited him severely.

Talking with a reporter last evening Stanford said in substance: "I proposed early in the spring going to Europe at about this time, so my trip is not compelled by the state of my health. My sickness prevented my intended visit to California, but I have made such progress toward recovery as to be able to carry out my plans for a sea voyage. I am now convalescent, and by the time of our return I hope to be restored to my old health. My physicians are satisfied that I have no organic trouble and they credit me with a very sound constitution. I suppose they would describe my affliction as muscular rheumatism with neuralgia. I have engaged return passage for November 1. I will visit the continent but have no definite plans. I have never been as far as Russia, so we will probably proceed to that country."

THE INCREASE OF PACIFIC ROADS

Respecting the consequences of the increase in number of through routes to the Pacific coast Stanford said: "The through traffic of the Central Pacific is so small a portion of its entire business that the completion of the Southern Pacific will not affect it seriously. The future of the Southern Pacific lies in the development of the territories which it will open up. The Central Pacific, with its numerous branch lines, occupying the best sections of California receives its life from local traffic. The Central Pacific starts in a northerly direction, and the Southern Pacific in a southerly, and the two routes are a thousand miles apart where the Union Pacific reaches the Missouri river. When the Atlantic and Pacific is completed to the Columbia river it will be an important line. Through business is so small, as I have said, that it need not be doubted that all of these lines will be supported by the new country which they will open to development. At no point where the two roads are parallel does the Atlantic and Pacific approach the Central Pacific nearer than 400 miles. The Baltimore and Ohio does not interfere with the local traffic of the New York Central nor does the New York Central affect that of the Baltimore and Ohio. The surroundings of these two roads are similar to those between the Atlantic and Pacific and the Central Pacific.

THE TEXAS PACIFIC LAND GRANT

The Southern Pacific, Stanford said, received an assignment of land grant from the Texas Pacific and under it completed the road from the Colorado river to El Paso. All of the conditions imposed by the government were fulfilled and it has received all the benefits that were to be derived from the road. The Indian wars along the way have been saved millions of dollars by the completion of the road besides the saving in loss of life. Not only does this benefit come from settlement of territory but also from facilities of transportation. Arizona had been inaccessible except by long journeys through deserts in which water had to be carried for men and beasts. Moreover the government received the benefit of the road soon [illegible] than it would have if the Southern Pacific had not completed the road. The road was built two or three years earlier than it would have been by the Texas and Pacific. I do not know what are the prospects for confirmation of the assignment as I have not given the matter my personal attention and I can only judge from the merits of the case."

CLASHING OF AUTHORITY

[illegible] ROSEBURG, May [illegible] 1883

To the Editor of the Oregonian

In your paper of the 18th inst under the title of "Clashing of Authority" you make a very unfair statement of the facts as they exist in the case of Kelley vs [illegible] lately determined by the supreme court in favor of [illegible] the [illegible] Watson [illegible] the facts in the action taken by our circuit court.

The facts are as follows: A writ [illegible] appeal was not [illegible] with the clerk of the circuit court until after the [illegible] the decree of reversal upon the ground of fraud and upon a proper showing [illegible] bond being filed the circuit court issued an injunction restraining [illegible] and the sheriff of this county from enforcing execution of said decree of reversal until the suit commenced by appellee to set aside said decree should be determined.

The supreme court then with Judge Watson dissenting issued a writ of mandamus ordering the judge of this court and the clerk and sheriff of this county to enforce execution of said decree of reversal notwithstanding the injunction.

This is the status of the case as it now stands. The question before the public is whether the supreme court can compel the judges of the circuit courts of this state to disregard their orders in suits pending before them before said suits properly come before the supreme court on appeal and further whether the supreme court can reach down into the counties of the state and compel the clerks and sheriffs to disregard the orders of their respective courts in advance of their jurisdiction on appeal.

FIGHT WITH THE HOSTILES.

General Crook Attacks the Apaches in the Sierra Madres and after a Severe Engagement [illegible]

[illegible]

AN ALLEGED [illegible]

The fight began at 10 A M and lasted until dark. The [illegible] the Indians [illegible] the progress of the fight [illegible] [illegible] It was during this [illegible] the greatest number were killed [illegible] [illegible] about 200 miles from Opasura [illegible] headquarters. The officers [illegible] General Crook has [illegible] no official news of the battle. All news [illegible] here has come through Mexican sources. [illegible] distributed from the San [illegible] to the foothills of the Sierra Madres as it is expected the hostiles will break up into small bands and raid settlements. The line is guarded by a triple cordon of United States soldiers and enlisted scouts for a distance of 150 miles, so it will be extremely difficult for the hostiles to escape and regain the security of San Carlos.

THE HOSTILES ESCAPE

After the battle the hostiles escaped in the darkness. Crook took the trail in the morning and probably before now has overhauled them with their women and children. Game is scarce in the region of the Sierra Madres where the hostiles are and as soon as their supply of horses and mules is exhausted they will be compelled either to surrender or break up in small bands and scatter throughout the country. It is this latter action that is feared both by the Mexican soldiers of Sonora and Chihuahua and residents on this side of the line.

ANOTHER ACCOUNT

WILLCOX, A T May 27 — [Special] — From reliable sources we learn the following in regard to Crook's fight on the 17th. He came on the hostiles near Huaycanope, in the Sierra Madre mountains about eighty miles southeast of Opasura. The Indian scouts were ordered forward and opened fire on the hostiles, which was returned, and it was then found that the Indians were intrenched some 600 leaving their intrenchments and driving the scouts back toward the main body, killing a number of them. Crook at once ordered a general advance and after a fight lasting from early morning till near night, compelled the hostiles to retreat. Crook lost about forty men and the scouts lost nearly the same number. The Indians retreated southward from there, Crook being in hot pursuit.

Some Mexicans who have just arrived from the scene claim that Indian scouts refused to fight, and even threatened to open fire on Crook and the white soldiers if he persisted in hostilities against the Indians and that in consequence Crook was compelled to retreat from the battle field. This is not credited here as the informant who brought the news of Crook's success is in every way responsible and trustworthy, and came from the immediate vicinity of the fight. He reports that only two were wounded — white soldiers — neither fatally.

FROM DEMING

DEMING May 27 — [Special] — It is reported that a battle between Crook and the Apaches occurred about eighty three miles south of Casa Grande on the Sonora side of the Sierra Madres, near Guaycanope, a mining town of 300 inhabitants. Don Juan Elias' rancho at which the courier is said to have arrived with the news from Opasura lies between Magdalena and Biona, on the Rio Dolores. Opasura is one day's ride west of Guaycanope, and the former place is an important town, once the capital of the state. Indian scouts always go singly and in advance of the troops, and the large number with Crook would certainly cover three to four miles of country. On the first sign they are custom is to fall back and gather close together. This accounts for the report that Crook's advance guard was driven in. Casa Grande is 150 miles southwest of Deming. No persons have come from there since May 6. A Thompson drover with several herders who ought to have come in ten days since is feared is massacred. There are the best reasons for thinking that Crook has under-estimated the battle force, and parties who trade from that point with Scarr's ranches place the number at 400.

ANOTHER RUMOR ABOUT CROOK

DEMING N M May 27 — [Special] — Advices from San Buenaventura, confirm the killing of two men on the 20th, twenty one miles southwest of San Lorenzo. The Mexican general had gone into camp on the 17th and was awaiting the arrival of reinforcements from the surrounding villages before pursuing a band of over one hundred Indians who passed west through canyon Alamos. This band it is asserted was commanded by Juh, but the Mexican who brings the reports insists that all hostiles are joining forces and marching to meet General Crook who they have heard was coming to meet them. Crook is in communication with the Mexican generals and is not far off.

THE CATTLE MEN SAFE

DEMING May 27 — [Special] — The delayed cattle men are safe at Namiquipa, Chihuahua unable to drive their stock north till the Indians are subdued. A Mexican general was taking reinforcements on May 17 at a point seven leagues south of San Lorenzo, Chihuahua for the purpose of pursuing a band of 100 hostiles who had gone toward the Sierra Madres. It is stated by good authority direct from the front that the hostiles are joining their forces to meet General Crook and are marching toward him.

AN EARLY RISE

The quiet, orderly portion of our citizens who re tire at a seasonable hour and get up in time for breakfast have but little idea of the aspect of our city during the hours they are peacefully slumber ing. A reporter of this paper was invited to ac company a fishing member of the legal fraternity on a fishing excursion yesterday, the procession to start at 4 o'clock in the morning. The invitation was accepted and as the reporter did not finish his work till 2 o'clock he did not deem it worth while to retire, and so he came to see the town in the early morning hours. At 2 o'clock he turned out the gas and went out for some supper. He found a restaurant in full blast, a considerable company of both sexes eating and drinking and making jolly. After feeding, there being still some time to spare, he visited a billiard hall which was brilliantly lighted and where many young men and a few old ones were punching ivory to their hearts' content, imbibing sundry refreshments between games. A little after three o'clock he started for his lodgings to get his fishing tackle and gum boots. On his way he met half a dozen persons, fishing-rod in hand and creel strapped on, bound for the country.

At 3:30 he was on his return down town. The stars, except one, had faded from the sky, swallows were twittering overhead and robins singing in the shrubbery of gardens. Gamblers and their associates by the dozen were going home, the rum ble of a wagon was occasionally heard and one con taining a number of young fellows going fishing was met. Arriving at a restaurant he met his legal friend promptly on the stroke of 4. During breakfast they were annoyed by persons at another table talking of where they had fished, where the trout leaped a foot out of the water after the fly and then fought like tigers. Driving down to the ferry they saw newsboys playing pitch penny with silver dollars, and on board the boat at 4:30 they saw the sun rise in all his splendor, the first time that the reporter had seen such a sight in many months. Crossing over the ferry they drove through the deserted streets of our sister city and bowled out into the open country. The morning was lovely, the dew gemmed grass glittered in the bright sunshine, the birds caroled from the trees and all nature seemed gay. The first sign of life seen was a gang of Chinamen hard at work hoeing in a well tilled patch of garden sass. A little further on a corral full of cows was seen, nervously stepping about and wondering why some one did not come to milk them and let them go out to graze. A few miles on a white man was seen standing at the door of a cabin wiping his face after his morning ablution. And then it was day. The grass beside the road was dotted with flowers, the purple iris, strawberry blossoms and wild pea, while in the brush was seen the beautiful wild honey suckle, etc.

The less said about the day's sport, the better. The creek was simply a confounded slough, full of drift and brush and warm and muddy. The catch was very small, and the reporter preferred to lie on his back under an apple tree in a farm orchard and listen to the larks in the meadow, the woodpeckers in the forest and the wind soughing through the trees. The legal gentleman kept after the trout as persistently as if they were criminals and had been indicted in the state circuit court. The drive home in the evening was splendid, the sunset gorgeous, the sky being gotten up for the occasion in all shades of shrimp pink and mashed strawberry.

COLUMBIA CITY NEWS.

[FROM OUR LOCAL CORRESPONDENT.]

COLUMBIA CITY, May 26.

Your correspondent is informed that the work of developing the coal mine near town will begin in July.

Some fine looking iron ore taken from the hills west of town this week will be sent to San Francisco for a careful assay.

The piles for the railroad bridge at the canyon be low town have been driven and grading is being done between here and Kalama.

The local land boom continues, town lots having advanced steadily in price, while improved places along the line of the railroad between here and Port land are in considerable demand.

The growth of business has been such that the proprietors of the steam sawmill here are putting in new and more powerful machinery, and the mill is shut down temporarily in consequence.

Work on the switch from the main track at Colum bia City to low water on the river has begun. The track will be laid at once, so that construction sup plies can be taken from the river to the main track.

Some new buildings are in process of erection now but it is not expected that much building will be done until the completion of the railroad, at which time we are assured that a fine wharf and warehouse will be built, and that other improvements of a sub stantial character will be made.

Our people beg leave to lend their assistance to the Oregon Iron and Steel Company in the location of their works, and to suggest that with a mine of bituminous coal within two miles of the town and an unlimited supply of fir timber suitable for charcoal, and with iron ore only one mile distant, the afore said company might find this an eligible site for their extensive works.

LAKE COUNTY NOTES.

[FROM THE OREGONIAN'S LOCAL CORRESPONDENT.]

LAKEVIEW, Or., May 16.

There is rumor of an Indian outbreak in Warner valley but it is not credited.

Several families have lately settled in our valley west of town, and there is room for more yet.

At the spring rodeo in Warner valley four vaqueros branded and marked 156 calves in 112 min utes.

Lakeview will celebrate the Fourth in appropri ate style. Three days' racing will be an attractive feature.

Some gold mines have been reopened near here recently. There are evidences that operations were carried on many years ago and some say the "Lost Cabin" may have been here.

At the county court this week A. F. Snelling was appointed county clerk, vice R. H. Hatton resigned, and A. W. Charlton sheriff, vice J. L. Hanks re signed. Both are considered good appointments.

Circuit court concluded its business last week. William Luttrell, convicted of forgery, was sen tenced to three years in the penitentiary. The case of Wm. Webb vs. L. M. Nicholson, Indian agent, and Colonel S. G. Whipple, U. S. A., for unlawful im prisonment was transferred to the U. S. district court at Portland.

POSITIVE SALE OF THE MALARKEY PROPERTY.

To-day, at 1 o'clock in the afternoon, A. B. Richardson will sell to the highest bidder, at the county court house door, lots 12, 13 and 14 in the Central block. For a business site this locality cannot be surpassed. The improvements are easily made and the bed rock being of a gravelly nature, any foundation built upon it will really last forever. Heavy business firms of almost every character are being established in this vicinity. In fact, within a radius of three blocks all the heaviest wholesale business in Portland is transacted. The lots have a frontage of seventy feet and are eighty feet deep. The title is perfect, and the purchaser ac quires the right of way of ingress and egress to and from the rear of said lots across the wharf, in the rear thereof, from and to any street or alley lying north or south of said lots. To the capitalist desiring a sure in vestment, or to the speculator wishing to make fifteen or twenty per cent on his investment within a few months, the purchase of this property is just the thing. Remember, one o'clock this afternoon at the county court house this property must be sold.

FROM THE LOWER CASCADES.

[FROM THE OREGONIAN'S LOCAL CORRESPONDENT.]

LOWER CASCADES, May 26.

Warren's two fish wheels built on this side the river and just completed, have begun to dip up fish. The run this season until yesterday has been incon sequent, the salmon few and small.

The county commissioners at their last sitting granted the petition of N. Waber to sell spirituous and malt liquors at the old garrison for six months. This is, I believe, the only saloon in Skamania county.

The Cascades academy, with Miss Lyons as prin cipal, is in a flourishing condition. The attendance is regular, the students attentive and deeply enlisted in their studies. The present term promises well from the mental activity of those attending.

A disturbance occurred at the Upper Cascades last week, occasioned by one Imans attempting to cut down a fishing stand whereon stood a load of the A rest, who would have been tumbled into the seeth ing river but for the interference of an individual whom his neighbors have seen fit to particularize as "Fambill Bull." A lively set-to was the outcome and adjustment of difficulties was referred to Justice Goodhart. Fine and costs were taxed to Imans.

The county commissioners of Spokane at their last session levied the following tax:

County	8	mills
School	5
Road	6
Territorial	2½
Special for bridges	2
Total	23½	mills

This is justly regarded by the people as high tax ation but is necessitated to make up for losses of county funds in the Moffet fire last fall.

THE CASCADES AS A WATERING PLACE.

The Cascades is destined to become a popular mountain resort for invalids, pleasure seekers and tourists. Nature's objects of interest are many, varied and in point of grandeur unapproachable by any other point on the river. The mountains are the loftiest, the lakes the most transparent and serene, teeming with finny life. The trout fished from their clear waveless depths are symphonies of form and color. The warm springs have medicinal properties unequaled by any on the upper coast, the waters plenteous, healing, unfailing in supply. An unpre tentious hotel, with comfortable accommodations for a limited number and several bath houses, was built at the springs last summer, and found inade quate for the entertainment of guests, in conse quence of which a large addition to the hotel will go up this summer, together with more bath houses. Superadded to all this is a historical and romantic part, chapters full of direful situ ations and sanguinary conflicts between the noble red men and his white brethren. The Indian vil lages clustering on the verdant banks of purling streams or nestled at the foot of fir-clad hills af ford to the uninitiated curious realistic pictures of half civilized savagery. The famed block house of mournful memories remains to us yet, but in an in different state of preservation, a shabby embodi ment of an historic past. All this coupled with our proximity to Portland and The Dalles, with quick transit to either city through a region of unrivaled scenery, should place the Cascades on a level with the most favored resort of the northwest coast.

STATE DISPATCHES.

Woolen Mill for Salem.

SALEM, May 27.—[Special.]—At a special meeting of the board of trade held last evening, Mr. Stuart made the following proposition to the citizens of Salem in relation to the proposed erection of a woolen mill. The probable cost of the proposed im provements is estimated at $66,370. Mr. Stuart agrees to subscribe for $20,000 worth of stock, William Reid $10,000 and W. N. LaDue $5000, upon the condition that $25,000 of the stock shall be subscribed by res idents of Salem. The donation already subscribed by our citizens to be applied to the benefit of the company amounts to $10,000. The following com mittee was at once appointed to solicit subscrip tions: J. J. Murphy, T. B. Wait, W. L. Wade, Squire Farrar, Wm. England and Alonzo Gesner. There was no little enthusiasm shown and hopes are entertained that the necessary amount will be raised.

The military staff of Governor Moody as com mander-in-chief is as follows:

The roster thus far bears upon its face the stamp of intelligence and efficiency and has certainly been selected with care and a judicious knowledge of the requirements of the service. Governor Moody has again displayed excellent judgment in these selections and increased activity and proficiency in the ranks of our militia service is confidently ex pected.

NEWS NOTES FROM THE DALLES.

[FROM THE OREGONIAN'S LOCAL CORRESPONDENT.]

DALLES, Or., May [illegible]

The street sprinkler comes up once more to the joy of merchants who hate dust on their goods.

The woman Marie Fischler who shot herself on the morning of the 24th lived twenty hours, dying yesterday morning.

Hon. Robt. Mays, wife and daughter, Dr. and Mrs. Logan, Wm. Beevers, Mrs. A. A. Bonney and Miss Nell French start for San Francisco to-day.

R. H. Greely, forwarding merchant, has loaded over forty teams in the past week, mostly for Yakima. He expects to load as many more next week.

Street Commissioner Bulls is rapidly making the streets have a more presentable appearance. Alleys are getting to be of more use for travel and side streets look as well as main streets formerly did.

Two prominent merchants, getting into a law suit about a horse yesterday, agreed to settle the dispute when the trial was half finished by throwing dice. The loser of the horse cheerfully gave up the quadruped won by this novel method.

The triple plated instruments, nine in number, for the ladies' cornet band have arrived. They are sil ver plated and very elegant. For the next few weeks houses in the vicinity of their practicing hall can be rented very cheap. However The Dalles lived through untold agony from the academy band and may be able to endure the silver cornetists after their mouths get the right pucker.

A joint committee of the county court and board of trade report favorably on the free bridge ques tion. There is a perfectly feasible route, and good opportunity for a bridge to cross Des Chutes river twenty-five miles above the mouth. Action will be taken by both bodies in a very few days to make a free bridge at this point. There is nothing of more solid, practical value to The Dalles needed than this bridge.

NATIONAL EXERCISES OF THE GRAND ARMY

Full Text of the Sermon Delivered by the Rev Geo F Plummer Rector of Trinity Church

The services last evening at the Taylor street M E Church were appropriate to the Sunday immediately preceding Decoration Day and were by official orders made the national exercise of the Grand Army of the Republic of this city. The interior of the church was hung with flags about the altar and walls while bouquets of flowers and wreaths of living green were tastefully arranged about the pulpit. The pastor Rev G W Izer delivered the following address to as large an audience as ever before assembled in that building.

GOD AMONG THE NATIONS

Text—Blessed is the nation whose God is the Lord and the people whom he hath chosen for his own inheritance.—Psalm xxxiii 12

He hath not dealt so with any nation and as for his judgments they have not known them. Praise ye the Lord.—Psalm cxlvii 20

And hath made of one blood all nations of men for to dwell on all the face of the earth and hath determined the times before appointed and the bounds of their habitation that they should seek the Lord.—Acts xvii 26 27

Among the sublime scenes in the history of Moses, as the commander and leader of God's Israel, is one of superlative interest and impressiveness. It opens just at the close of his eventful earthly life. Lo He is about to surrender the insignia of his office to his successor, he is already under the divine appointment to go up to the heights of Nebo where his grave awaits him, he has delivered the law to the priests, he has given an exhortation to the elders, he has uttered his final charge to Joshua, and round about the base of old Nebo he has gathered the congregation of the people that he may speak to them parting words. His speech is most lofty, and his theme is most exalting. Listen to the grand old law-giver and leader of Israel

Give ear O ye heavens, and I will speak, and hear, O earth, the words of my mouth

My doctrine shall drop as the rain, my speech shall distil as the dew, as the small rain upon the tender herb, and as the showers upon the grass

Because I will publish the name of the Lord ascribe ye greatness unto our God

He is the rock, his work is perfect for all his ways are judgment: a God of truth and without iniquity, just and right is he.

Remember the days of old, consider the years of many generations ask thy father, and he will shew thee, thy elders, and they will tell thee.

When the most high divided to the nations their inheritance, when he separated the sons of Adam, he set the bounds of the people according to the number of the children of Israel.

For the Lord's portion is his people, Jacob is the lot of his inheritance

He found him in a desert land, and in the waste howling wilderness, he led him about, he instructed him he kept him as the apple of his eye

As an eagle stirreth up her nest, fluttereth over her young, spreadeth abroad her wings, taketh them, beareth them on her wings

So the Lord alone did lead him, and there was no strange god with him

He made him ride on the high places of the earth, that he might eat the increase of the fields and he made him suck honey out of the rock, and oil out of the flinty rock

Butter of kine, and milk of sheep, with fat of lambs, and rams of the breed of Bashan, and goats, with the fat of kidneys of wheat, and thou didst drink the pure blood of the grape

Following this review of God's dealings with them as a nation, Moses entreats them to faithfulness toward him and warns them of the fearful consequences of sin. Then, himself an example of the just judgments of God against wrong-doing, he goes up to the summit of Nebo, and out of the sight of all Israel, that he may catch a glimpse of the land which he cannot enter—just one glimpse before he die. See the grand old patriarch! He has toiled up the mountain steeps, he stands upon its crest. A moment's pause, and he steps out on yon spur, and looking westward, the "Land of Promise," from the Jordan to the "Great Sea," stretches before his view. Away to the north lies snow-ridged Lebanon, to the south lies the valley of Jezreel, broadening into the plains of Sharon. Hermon, and Tabor, and Carmel, and Olivet lift themselves into towering heights and rise majestic above the vales beneath. Jordan like a ribbon of silver, rolls and winds peacefully onward from Lebanon to the sea, while far away in the west spreads that vast continent of waters—the Mediterranean. The whole land is crowned with summer, vine clad hills and waving palm groves intersperse the landscape. But time hastens and Moses steps back from his pisgah and turns into his grave and is buried by the hand of the Lord. It is a grand spectacle and a glorious review of a people's history which inspiration has sketched in those closing chapters of Deuteronomy.

It is five score and seven years since we reached the borders and crossed over into the Canaan, which as a people we have possessed until this day. It is fitting that from the century heights of our history we remind ourselves of God's dealings with us, for truly, "he hath not dealt so with any other nation, and as for his judgments we have scarce known them." Therefore we should call one upon another, saying, "Praise ye the Lord!" "Blessed is the nation whose God is the Lord and the people whom he hath chosen for an inheritance." [Here the speaker gave an extended exegesis of the passages of scripture contained in the text.]

* * * * * * *

The scripture is full and explicit in its teaching that God has to do with the affairs of nations

By me kings reign and princes decree justice, by me princes rule, and nobles, even all the judges of the earth." "There is no power but of God, the powers that be are ordained of God." He putteth down one and setteth up another. The words of the text declare, "He hath made of one blood all nations of men for to dwell on all the face of the earth, and hath determined the times before appointed, and the bounds of their habitation." * * * Jehovah is in all history. He is the supreme power to which nations owe their being. From him they receive their appointments and to him they are responsible; under his superintendence they rise or fall according as they fulfill or thwart the divine purpose. Nations are to "seek the Lord" to understand his will. "The nation that will not serve thee shall perish, yea, those nations shall be utterly wasted." God has planted us a nation, our origin and our history vindicate the statement. The most enlightened civilizations of the past never attained to the principles upon which this nation was founded. Equality of men before God, equality of men before the law, inalienable rights of the individual to life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness. No other nation ever started into being with ideas so advanced, no other nation ever measured up to them. The great nations of antiquity and most of those now existing have given little promise in their beginnings. * * * "The Declaration of Independence, fit companion-piece for Magna Charta and ever to be read in connection with it, was when it was penned and proclaimed, a capital transaction in human affairs, as such it has held its place in history, as such it will maintain itself while human institutions shall endure. The signers of the Declaration of Independence wrote their names where all nations should behold them and all nations should not efface them. It was 'in the course of human events' intrusted to them to determine whether the fullness of time had come when a nation should be born in a day. They declared the independence of a new nation in the sense in which men declare emancipation or declare war. The declaration created what it declared." Our star beamed out in the galaxy of nations with a suddenness and a brilliancy surprising, startling, surpassing any other national phenomenon that had ever been beheld by sage or statesman. Its resplendent light flashed and glowed through all the firmament turning and fixing the gaze of the peoples upon it. God took the sons of freedom whom he inspired with these sublime ideas of universal liberty and of universal brotherhood out from the midst of anarchy and human oppression and set them in this new world. Here he established them a free people. He gave them a great commission, they were to found a republic in which all the great liberties—liberty of conscience freedom of worship, right of assemblage free speech free press and free men—should find a home and enjoy a perpetual expression.

He gave them a great land a land of measureless resources and of infinite possibilities, a land of fertile valleys and fruitful hillsides, of illimitable prairies and boundless forests of inexhaustible mines and inestimable treasures, of multiplied systems of rivers and lakes and seas stretching a shore line more than sufficient to extend around the globe, a land lying in the belt of the world's greatness. Between the thirtieth and sixtieth degrees of north latitude all the great nations of the past have existed, and all the great nations of the present are to be found. True, outside these boundaries to the north and to the south there have existed nations noted for wealth luxury and magnificence but none that has been potent in giving direction to the sentiments and in shaping the [illegible] of mankind. Within this belt of power you will find all ancient empires Assyria and Persia Greece and Rome Egypt and Palestine and the modern kingdoms of Great Britain France Germany Russia and Italy. Within this belt of power you will find the ancient cities of Nineveh Babylon Thebes Corinth Athens Rome Alexandria and the modern capitals of the world London Paris Berlin St Petersburg and Vienna. Within this belt of power you will find such rulers and chieftains as Darius and Cyrus Alexander and the Cæsar Napoleon and Wellington. Within this belt of power you will find the home of poetry and philosophy, fashion and statesmanship of commerce and arts of letters and law. Herein we hold converse with the world's great minds and herein is treasured their great works. Find such names as Homer and Herod Virgil and Horace Tasso and Dante Milton and Shakspeare and study their poems. Find such names as Solon and Lycurgus and Justinian and study their law. Read such names as Socrates and Plato Aristotle and Zeno Kant and Des Cartes Locke and Bacon, and study their philosophies. Read such names as Praxiteles and Apelles Titian and Murillo Raphael and Michael Angelo Donatello and Leonardo da Vinci and study their sculptures and paintings. In all this long round we have not gone outside that wonderful belt of power and of progress civilization and culture. Within this belt and covering well nigh all its degrees of latitude God has planted this nation. Here north of the tropic sands and south of the polar snows sweeping over the lovely regions of the temperate zone removed from the belligerent powers of the old world, God has located us in a land stretching over the vast expanse of a continent, embracing a territory larger than the Roman empire blest with every variety of climate and enriched with every variety of resources. Truly the lines are fallen to us in pleasant places we have a goodly heritage.' God hath appointed our bounds. Verily He hath not dealt so with any other nation.

The God of nations who imbued our noble sires with their great principles gave to them their great commission, and established them in this great land, hath caused his gifts to descend upon and to multiply in the hands of their children even to the present generation. We have increased in domain from thirteen states into two score empires, with almost boundless territories out of which to erect two score more sovereign commonwealths. We have multiplied our population from 3,000,000 to 50,000,000. Our villages have grown into towns, and our towns into cities and where the painted savage roamed over the wilds and wastes of undeveloped lands we have constructed powerful states and massed untold treasure. We have secured and maintained our great principles of freedom, order and law. True it has cost, but we have ever been found able and willing to pay the price. We were born out of a struggle against foreign oppression, and we have enlarged our life and strengthened our principles despite numerous unfriendly forces within our own body politic. We have met giants in the way, and thank God, we have slain them. The giant of foreign oppression and the giant of foreign invasion have both been conquered. Slavery has been wiped out and secession has been strangled. * * * We have proven our right and our ability and our deep-throned purpose to preserve this union and maintain ourselves a nation. * * * The supreme question had been in the minds of the wisest of the statesmen in the old world. Can the American Union be perpetuated? Will the American people be found wise enough and powerful enough to assimilate the manifold diverse interests, and to hold in balance the contrary elements which carry in themselves if unconserved and unamalgamated, the seeds of sure destruction? It had long been seen that our danger lay not in the direction of foreign invasion but of civil strife. Our worst foes were internal, the war most to be dreaded, and which, should it ever come, would resolve itself into a struggle upon the issue of which the very life of the nation would be determined, was a fratricidal war. * * * The bitter conflict continued long in the halls of legislation. The war of ideas resolved itself at last into a war of arms. One April morning rebellion belched a volley of rage and defiance against the authority of our national government, the old flag was fired upon seized, dishonored, trailed in southern dust. No sooner did the electric current smite us with the intelligence than up went the stars and stripes on every hillside of the loyal north and thousands on thousands sprang to the defense of the lofty principles which had made "America" the magic word of hope to all the down-trodden peoples of the world. You remember those days, you were the men of those times, their mournful mementoes are in your hearts, their scars are in your flesh. "Disruption seemed inevitable, the ravens of secession croaked and mocked at us, unfriendly nations laughed at our calamity and sneered at us in the day of our trouble and with ill concealed satisfaction predicted our overthrow. But there were voices—yours among them—that cried out against it, millions of earnest men—you among them—said it must not be, swore it shall not be and were ready to pour out their blood to cement the slightest fracture. The green fields of Lexington and the ancient battle grounds of Carolina forbade it, the blood that flowed in the veins of our common heritage the common language and the common faith that belonged to us, were too near akin to permit it, the very winds that swept from our north sea highlands to our southern capes and the zephyrs that played from the gulf to the lakes, whispered and thundered their remonstrance, the rivers as they ran, crossing the lines of states, coursing north and south and east and west with the strong hills that stretched their bands around the land, all proclaimed it could not be. And there was the voice of justice telling of a common coffer whence these domains were purchased; there was the voice of warning, uttered by the renowned men who framed the constitution and founded the nation, charging us to resist every attempt at disunion, there was the voice of history, especially that of the Hebrews—God's other chosen people—speaking as a thunder out from the past, of divided Israel and Judah; there was the voice speaking out of the spirit of the age, protesting against the division of the noblest of all realms into petty clans and factions, there was the voice of prayer that went up from a thousand thousand altars to the heavens, and there was the voice of answer, which through the smoke of conflict and from above the crash of battle came down from God proclaiming and publishing as the decree of the high priest of the nations to north and south the bans of their perpetual union saying "Thou shalt no more be termed forsaken neither shall thy land any more be termed desolate, but thou shalt be called Hephzibah, and thy land Beulah for the Lord delighteth in thee and thy land shall be married." * * * Those were days that "tried men's souls," but out of our pangs came our transformation, we were regenerated, God gave enlargement to our freedom, he molded the nation anew, he uprooted the ancient evil. In all the deadly combat he was with us. We crimsoned a hundred gory fields and buried our martyr heroes on a hundred bloody battle grounds but, thanks to the God of nations, when the horrid strife was over we looked through blinding tears on our dear old flag and though a million graves had fallen not a star was shot away. * * * Thank God we've lived through all these conflicts and to day are a united people. We have trod the path of experiment a hundred years by the torch of liberty, until what was contingent has become certain and the twilight of faith with which we began the first century of our national life at the opening of this new century of our existence bursts into the noontide of reality

Twice fifty summers over past
  Have glimmered in her light
Twice fifty winters battling blasts
  Have girded her with might
The brave young giant waves her crest
  With well becoming pride—
From blue Atlantic's [illegible] breast
  To calm Pacific's tide
"The icebergs of the Arctic seas
  Shall be her northern bounds
And southward to the orange trees
  That hem the Isthmus round
Or Allegheny's [illegible]
  Her eastern portals rest
And bleak Nevada's white facade
  Looks out upon the west
Serenely arched from base to base
— The structure stands secure,
And while the pillars keep their place
  The temple must endure.
Yet sink the mountain summits when
  The sons of freedom rise
For stronger is the land in men
  Than peaks that pierce the skies
The flag that waved a hundred years
  Shall wave a thousand more
And homeless millions yet shall find
  A home upon her shore.

Oh, ye patriots shall this prophecy be realized, or awaits there for us or for our children bitter disappointment. Perils still threaten us. As there is no form of government so glorious as a republic so there is none so difficult to administer, none that imposes such personal duties upon the citizen, none that calls for such unswerving loyalty, such constant [illegible] and patriotism on the part of the people. * * We need to guard against [illegible] and maintain entire separation of church and state [illegible] church and state [illegible]

Freedom of speech freedom of the press and freedom of worship as principles may all of them be perverted to unholy uses and be made to cover the most scandalous abuse of the rights individual and collective of society. 'Eternal vigilance' and intelligent discrimination must ever be the price of our liberties. * * * To this hour, God to whom belongeth the shields of the earth hath defended us. His purpose in us shall not fail. It shall be ours to carry the sacred principles of human freedom around the globe. We shall teach kings and princes and mighty men how to rule with respect to the inalienable rights of the individual and we will teach subjects everywhere how to submit to the just claims of government in society. * * * Ninety odd years ago when all generous hearts were beating with hope at the opening of the French revolution Jean Paul wrote "At the sunset gates of this century stands graven in beams of light Here is the way to virtue and to wisdom as at the western gate of Cherson stands the proud inscription Here is the way to Byzantium. Infinite providence thou wilt cause the day to dawn." "Three generations have gone by, and for Europe that day has not yet dawned. It is still the twelfth hour of the night the birds of prey are still on the wing, and dock and arsenal ring loud as ever with preparations for mutual slaughter. Princes and aristocracies challenge their parts in the dark and lurid prospect. Kings and emperors and dukes and field marshals set themselves in tinseled array and the common people fawn before and fly after the vain glare of the imperious crowd, as moths fly around a lighted candle. America saw its way a century ago and through her sunset gate, ever against this new western world lies Byzantium to the nations of the earth whose institutions are waxing old and whose faiths have ceased to be divine. When they have passed through this way then will the glories of the ancient empires, together with the splendors of their renowned civilizations, be eclipsed by the greater glories and the sublimer splendors of a new civilization which shall be universally acknowledged to have had its center and its source in our American republic.

DR. MARVIN ON "THE SOLDIERS GRAVES."

Yesterday morning the First Congregational church on Second street was filled with a very large and attentive audience. The preacher's desk was draped in the national colors and covered with flowers. Dr Frederic R Marvin the pastor took for his subject "The Soldiers Graves." His text was Isa lxi 3, 'Beauty for Ashes.'

He said. At Lucerne Switzerland there is an old covered bridge ornamented with twenty four pictures entitled The Dance of Death.' It represents death as interrupting the pleasures and duties of life, as seizing upon men and women in moments of delight and bearing them to the grave. The picture is grim and ghastly but represents with fidelity the old view of death. How gloomy and repulsive were the funeral emblems of a century ago—the shroud the coffin the pall mourners heavily draped in black sermons solemn long and dismal as an underworld, and interspersed with sighs of despondency! Men described death as a skeleton—a king of terrors lurking in every joy and hiding behind every pleasure. Now these things are all changed. The Dance of Death is quaint and neglected and no longer stands for a living faith. Visit any graveyard fifty or sixty years old and you will find headstones ornamented with skull and cross bones, Time with scythe and glass urns weeping willows and melancholy couplets. But these things are not common in the modern cemetery. A more cheerful view of life has made death less dreadful. Angels floating heavenward, hands pointing to the sky, and tender loving, hopeful verses have driven away, let us hope forever, the ghastly skeletons, dry bones, cypress wreathed urns and weeping willows.

Nothing more clearly indicates the change which has come over public feeling in this matter than the custom of decorating graves with flowers. The custom, though ancient, fell into long disuse. Classic history records many a touching story of floral tributes to the dead. Strange a custom so beautiful and significant should have come into neglect. The infant church had no rebuke for the [illegible] and happy hope and warm emotion of the Greek mind and heart, it was jubilant itself even amid persecution and distress. The Christian graves under Rome witness to the sweet and hopeful lives of the early followers of the Christ. The early christians took reasonable, devout and cheerful views of both life and death. They looked upon the grave as a resting place and the gate to heaven. But when error in the second century tainted the fountains of doctrine with asceticism and austerity death ceased to be an angel of release and became a grim and ugly spectre a skeleton and a king of terrors. Distinctively theological training is always more or less sad, while simple christian culture which is not confined to the intellect but seizes upon the affections also sanctifying, and exalting them is essentially light hearted. The more we realize the Savior's presence the happier we are. The dark ages and especially the thirteenth century destroyed for the time all that was warm tender, noble and hopeful in religion and gave us a system of hard barren superstition. But the ages of darkness are departed and with them symbols of loss and garments of sorrow are being put aside. Death is no longer the central fact of existence, nor is he crowned king of terrors. The pall is disappearing, the coffin so angular and repulsive has given place to the graceful and rounded casket decorated with satin and silver and covered with orange blossoms, violets wreaths, crosses and crowns. It is no longer thought necessary that hearses should be entirely black. The mound will soon be forgotten and the cemetery is already a garden and a park. Here we have the two pictures upon one canvas. The Dance of Death, painted for our fathers and The Decoration of Graves with Flowers for our children.

During the coming week we shall strew flowers upon the graves of our dead soldiers. True these men were not all of them what they should have been, some were hirelings vagabonds and desperadoes some had no conception of the moral grandeur of the cause for which they fought some drifted into the army by sheer necessity were drafted and could not escape. All this is admitted. Were flowers strewn upon the graves of saints only perhaps our gardens would not suffer. But most of these men did love their country and were worthy soldiers of a sacred cause champions of liberty and avengers of wrong. Most of them were courageous and self-sacrificing and this at least is certain, they all fell under a common flag and for a common cause and we can not, ought not even wish to distinguish between them. Remembering the virtues of the dead remembering their valor and their suffering calling to mind their weary nights and days of peril and what they cheerfully endured for our sakes let no hand refuse a flower to any grave. Strew the choicest flowers on these precious graves. In the floral tribute thus offered we honor at once the brave-hearted dead and the true hearted living.

And I go one step further. Let flowers be scattered on all graves, even upon the graves of our foes. Why not? The conflict is over. The dead are at peace. They lie quietly in their graves and the green grass covers them all. God decorates them all with his spring violets lilies and wild roses. The birds sing to them all, and nature is equally kind and tender to them all. Let us decorate the graves in the north and south east and west all over the country without respect to party creed or color. Let no word be spoken that shall open the old wound or [illegible] hatred. The dead no longer hate each other and let us imitate their example. Let us think kindly of our foes and forgive them. Our union soldiers were splendid men and the [illegible] who fought with them were [illegible]. Let us honor them and celebrate their courage. Our foes were wrong, fearfully wrong. They fought for treason and slavery and for all that [illegible] independent manhood. Is it not punishment enough to die [illegible]. They were many of them [illegible] and we [illegible] their education we too might have shared in the same guilt and shame. They were more [illegible] worthy of respect than north [illegible] their country with their lips and [illegible] fight for the [illegible] slavery they advocated. I would much prefer the record of a confederate soldier than that of a northern copperhead. We cannot justify the confederate but we can think kindly of them and in pity clothe their graves with the mantle of forgiveness. Let no hand refuse to fling flowers even though [illegible] the willow of weeping.

Under the sod and the dew
  Waiting the judgment day
[illegible] and tears for the blue
  Tears and love for the gray

We can not forget Fort Pillow Lawrence Andersonville and Libby. We cover these with no sentimental glamour only the most cruel spirit of hell could have made them possible. But these were episodes and not the history of our rebellion. Let us love our country and serve it with manly honor and fidelity. Let us embody in our lives the heroic qualities our union soldiers displayed in theirs.

In closing his sermon Dr Marvin spoke with deep feeling of the women who devoted themselves to the care of the soldiers in the hospitals who followed them to the battle field and on the long march. He wanted their graves decorated also. He spoke of the colored soldiers and praised their courage and fidelity. We ought to remember the noble army of martyrs the southern unionists who found no place where they could fight for their country, and yet who could not betray her. They perished in silence. No sympathetic ear caught the voice of their agony. They fell under the smoking ruins of their homesteads and buried in unknown graves. Oh what splendid lives have been given a sacrifice on the altar of liberty that slavery might be abolished and our union saved from anarchy and dissolution. From the martyrdom of the sainted hero, John Brown whose soul, thank God, is marching on—to the last and humblest private in the ranks, who gave his life for his country, our advocates and defenders of liberty and truth have been a unit in the glorious work. They fought and died together and we remember them in love. God grant the bells of the nineteenth century may—

Ring out a slowly dying cause,
And ancient forms of party strife,
Ring in the nobler modes of life
With sweeter manners, purer laws—

Ring in the valiant man and free,
The larger heart and kindlier hand
Ring out the darkness of the land,
Ring in the Christ that is to be

TRINITY CHURCH.

The rector Rev Geo F Plummer, delivered the following sermon to his hearers yesterday morning taking as his text

Colossians ii 8—Beware, lest any man spoil you through philosophy and vain deceit after the tradition of men after the rudiments of the world, and not after Christ.

Perhaps the word philosophy has been as much abused and has led to as much confusion and distraction of thought, as any other word imported into our language. Though literally the love of or search after wisdom, it has through theories and guesses, endeavored to explain things human and divine,—and to grasp the causes in which they are contained. Indeed, theology itself has been reckoned a part or branch of philosophy. But there is a confusion of terms here, which I think has done much mischief and if I can make plain to you the distinction between the gospel revelation and philosophy so called I shall have done much to enable you to understand the meaning of St Paul when he says Beware lest any man spoil you through philosophy. The early Christians—at least the original apostles—knew nothing of philosophy as we understand that word. They had no theories—they made no guesses. Their religion was centered in a person. They believed and they taught no theories but facts. The Lord had become man. He had been veritably born of a virgin. He had been as truly crucified dead and buried. He had just as truly risen from the grave and ascended into heaven. This was the sum and substance of apostolic teaching. From the throne of God, to which the Savior had advanced he was to come again to judge the world. Their preaching, began and centered in Jesus the only Son of God. They cared not for nor did they pretend to philosophic speculations. But as the faith spread, men came into the church who had never seen the Lord, had never seen one of the apostles, and the old habit of theorizing came back upon them. Even in St Paul's day, and in Colosse, philosophies which the apostle called vain deceits had crept into being. They wanted to explain things, they wanted to account for things. And so, some of the strongest and vaguest theories were proclaimed. Most of these vagaries were built upon Gnostic principles, whose prime mover was that Simon Magus whom St Peter declared to be in the bonds of wickedness. All of our modern theories have grown out of this Gnostic philosophy. They have been reproduced in abundance in our own day, and the warning of the apostle is as applicable to us as it was to the Colossians. No theological error of modern times is new. It has appeared before, and has been pounded and beaten to a jelly by the sledge hammer blows of christian logic. These errors assume different shapes now and then, but unless they are downright, senseless unbelief they are Gnosticism in some of its many forms—theories guesses—which made their appearance in the earliest ages and as the church survived them then she will ride triumphantly through them now, growing, in fact stronger and better from the conflict. Those theorists were not exactly unbelievers in the gospel revelation, but they put strange constructions upon revelation. They destroyed the reality of our Lord's manhood, they made his body a phantom. They supposed an eon or emanation from above to have entered into him, and to have been his human soul. They had strange notions as to the malignity of all matter. They talked about philosophy even of truth and yet left us sometimes uncertain as to God's omnipotence. They did not go to their notions from what apostles or prophets had actually written but what they supposed these men ought to have written. The apostle St Paul mocks all their theories about eons and angels and phantoms and what not—by declaring in the verse succeeding my text that in our blessed Lord dwelt all the fullness of the Godhead bodily. This great apostle did not preach theories he was content with facts. He told of a day when everything seemed lost—when society was rotten to its core when faith and virtue were well nigh gone when the human race seemed on the verge of death and when in the darkest hour life had come into the world through the life and death of Jesus.

This is christian philosophy beloved. It reads the marvels and beauties of creation the world's vast mysteries the longings of the heart the unexplained things in life, in the light of our Lord's incarnation. It does not stop to explain everything. It says some things cannot be explained. It points us to the facts on which it is built and to the results that have followed those facts. And I think you will all agree with me that any philosophy which does not take account of the world's regeneration through our Lord Jesus Christ is a defective philosophy. Such philosophy has not only not advanced or made progress. It has actually returned to the beggarly elements of the world. And I believe further, that any theory which would remove the least moral restraint from man's life, which would even lessen the strength of moral responsibility, cannot be actuated by love of truth! For truth as far as it concerns God's dealings with men must be on the side of virtue and happiness. This is only obeying St John's injunction and trying the spirits whether they be of God. If there ever comes up a philosophy which will teach men more effectually and with greater motive power than christian philosophy does to love God and man—a philosophy which will make men happier in time than christianity does and will make them then we may pause and consider that philosophy. It is not the part of wise men to turn our backs upon what there is of peace and harmony and beauty in the world—confessedly produced by the religion of Jesus—and give heed to theories and fancies which would rob us of them all. In a world like ours we must fix our minds upon definite questions, and keep them to definite results. There are people who will talk and talk until the listener hardly knows whether he lives or not. Break away from such and place before you the definite questions of life and death. We do not live in this world, that is certain. How came we here and what is the object of our being. There can be but three conceptions. A man must be an Atheist a Pantheist or a true Deist. He must be one or the other. If he is an Atheist he must believe that blind and unconscious agencies produced the wonderful variety and adaptability to man's life which we see around us gradually shaped itself from lower to higher until it broke at length into Cæsar Charlemagne Shakspear Goethe Byron Napoleon. If he is a Pantheist he must believe that God is a resultant of forces which he did not create which he cannot control and of whose very existence he has no real conceptions, a mist behind which I cannot help stating is a misty way.

On the other hand if he cannot believe either of these if a thousand insuperable objections offer themselves he must believe that God is the creator of heaven and earth the author of all law that he sees and hears and feels and knows the [illegible] of all life that loves justice which impels him to hate sin and love righteousness and that our deeds and lives are acceptable or abhorrent in his sight as we defy or obey his given law. Now multiply the love of God until it expands into the incarnation the boundless love which showed itself on the cross and we have christian philosophy. Compared with this a love which we are assured of how idly and unsatisfying are all the theories the vain deceits and philosophies of man!

The text says Beware lest any man spoil you. Spoil means literally to haul away captive. Our Lord says How can one enter into a strong man's house and spoil his goods except he first bind the strong man? We can interpret the word through that exhortation of St John Hold fast that thou hast that no man take thy crown. Christian philosophy looks upon every man as heir presumptive to an everlasting crown. Let no man take thy crown is, then the sense of the word spoil. And I want to tell you how I believe the enemy may spoil us.

He may do it by making us in love with the world and the things of the world. Without going into any minute definition we know that the love of the world has shipwrecked many a soul. Whether it be a desire for wealth or fame, or position—or whether it be that vain love of display so common in the world,—we know that all these things war against our Lord's precepts—against heart purity and religious fervor. If you can lay hold of the thought brought before us in christian philosophy—the thought of another life and a crown to wear—then you can understand how well the evil one loves to see us setting anything in the place of God. The christian may use the world as well as other people. But the christian will not suffer the things of this world to usurp the uppermost place in his thoughts and love. He remembers the activity of the enemy, and he sees in his growing love for the world not simply something which springs unaided from himself, but an allurement of Satan. And he conquers it, because he knows it is one of the chains which the strong man is forging about him.

The enemy may spoil us again, through vain deceits. Remember the word spoil means to lead captive. It is easy to see that one who wished to get entire control of us, spiritually, would endeavor to put into our hearts and minds many doubts and fancies concerning our life, its origin and destiny. I have known men try to do this in order to lead some intended victim into positive wickedness. Belief in God and God's goodness will do much to keep us from sin. So he who would lead us to deeds of actual guilt, will frequently begin by trying to undermine our faith. The instigator of all such attempts is our enemy—in whatever guise he presents himself. We ought to be specially ware of these deceits. For where men can know so little, it is natural that much room must be left for speculation. Any one can see, who wishes to see that our God could not have made all things concerning human life perfectly plain, without at the same time, contradicting that plan of government which he has arranged for men in all things else. To have left us room for faith—for the exercise of those faculties of soul and body which God has given us—would not even according to our own view have been best for us. And see how many "vain deceits" may arise if we seek them. We may try to believe because there is sin in the world, that evil is eternal. We may try to believe, because there is evident rebellion in the world, that God does not govern the world at all—does not hold the reins at all. Because the righteous often suffer with the wicked, and things do not turn out as our judgment says they ought we may try to be sure that there is no reward for the righteous that the world has no moral governor at all. There is room enough you see, for all kinds of fancies. Deceits in the original means departure from a given way. There is no book like the Bible for studying the meaning of ordinary words. The given way here is the way laid down—marked out—by the word of God. To get us to turn our backs upon that way is to spoil us. All such urgings and questionings will result in carrying us over to the side of evil. No man can lose his faith in God without in some degree losing his faith in virtue and godliness. And to lose one's faith in these, is to submit to the agency of the devil. Therefore, St Paul says "Let no man spoil you." A firm, unflinching trust in God is best for a man in this world, whether he considers only time or whether he considers eternity also. It is the exhortation of a friend, as well as an apostle, Let no man spoil you." Hold fast to your faith. Nothing can possibly be better, or produce more happiness. And if it is true, and a crown is the result of its keeping, then eternal interests hang upon it.

The enemy may spoil us, again, by leading us back to the rudiments of the world, and making our faith such a faith as the natural man may derive from the natural earth. Such a faith is rank materialism. It does not rise above dust particles. This is the kind of belief, or unbelief, prevalent with infidels to-day. True, it is much harder to believe the teachings of materialism than to believe in God and his revelation. It is harder to believe that all the order of this universe—the provision made for man's comfort and happiness—are all the results of blind chance or material combinations, than it is to believe in an intelligent creator. And but for the fact of an evil power in the world, working upon man's fallen nature, no one would ever be found to entertain the thought. In his efforts to spoil us, the strong man armed will endeavor to make us believe that there is nothing in the world but matter, no true life, no true death and nothing whatever after death. The man who allows himself to be led into such belief is truly spoiled made a captive. Such belief binds him hand and foot. It leaves no room for love, or imagination, or zeal and enthusiasm. It offers no solace in trouble no future to look forward to, no help in temptation, no motive power to noble living or noble action. Such a man is a slave to his physical senses. "What is there to curb his appetites, to cleanse his thoughts, to purify his springs of action? What would the world be, if all men believed only in matter? Would it not be just such a place as our conceptions of the evil one would lead us to suppose he would have the world become?

And we should remember that all these ways of spoiling us follow each other naturally. They are steps in the downward course of life. A man begins by allowing himself to become absorbed in the love of the world. It may be by loving the world's ways—habits which the world holds well enough, but which God condemns. He does not want to give up those practices, and so he looks about for some excuse for continuing in them. He meets easily enough with some of the many conceits of the world and he adopts these conceits because they question faith or the necessity for obeying divine laws. From these conceits the downward course is easy. The next step is to descend to the rudiments of the world and believe only that which will enable us to have us free to act and live as we please. If a man would profit by the apostle's injunction, would keep himself from being led away captive by the devil he must guard himself at all points. If his mode of life is leading him into evil or unbelief he must change his mode of life. Anything which a man can give up any evil companion which he may turn himself away from will be a thousand times made up to him by that peace of mind and joy of heart which can only be obtained through the service of the living God.

dismay, thanked the landlord, and then left the house

"I suppose she is thinking to make an effort to pay it off" said Mr Rewitt, addressing his better half "and I hope she will but I fancy it will be a little too much for her"

For a whole week nothing was seen or heard of Jerry but at the end of that time his wife appeared and put down five shillings on the counter

"Will you please take that off the amount sir" she said "and give me the receipt"

This was done with a gracious smile and Jerry's wife departed Mr Rewitt announced his having hit the nail on the head The wife of the cobbler was making an effort to clear off her husband's debt

At the end of the second week a second five shillings was paid, and then harvest came on—truly a harvest to the agricultural laborer as at that time he gathers in clothing and whatever necessaries his harvest money will enable him to procure All the tradesmen in the little village were busy and even Jerry was reported to be full handed But he did not come near the Oram Arms for drink

On the third week Jerry's wife brought ten shillings and on the fourth, fifteen to the great joy and satisfaction of Mr Rewitt, whose joy, however was allowed by the fear that he had lost a customer He resolved to look Jerry up as soon as another installment of his account was paid

Nothing was brought for a fortnight and the landlord congratulated himself on not having hastily sought his absent customer but the appearance of Jerry's wife with the balance had the effect of making him think otherwise There was no display in putting down the money—it was quickly done—but the happy light in the woman's eyes as she took the receipt spoke more than mere words or actions

"I have been hasty with Jerry," said Mr Rewitt when another whole month had elapsed without Jerry appearing "He promised to pay at harvest time, and he did, but I have offended him, and the 'Green Goose' has caught his custom

"Go and see him," suggested his wife

"I intended to do so Here, give me out Tom's boots, they want a patch on the side, it will be an excuse for my dropping in upon him"

"That isn't much of a job for him, seeing that you give George Stevens the best of work," said Mrs Rewitt

"Stevens works better than Jerry," replied her husband, "you can always trust him to do his work when it is promised, but Jerry keeps things for weeks together"

"That is true, but I have got a pair of boots that want new fronts, and can wait a week or two Take them"

"I'll take both," said Richard Rewitt, "nothing like baiting your hooks while you are at it"

Armed for the reconquest of Jerry, the landlord set forth in the morning—that being a slack time when he could be easily spared from home Outside were a couple of loafers with no money and no credit. Mr Rewitt favored them with a lofty nod of indifference

Jerry's cottage was in the middle of the village, standing back about fifty feet from the middle of the road, and although its inside poverty had been well known, the outside, thanks to his wife, looked quite as well as its neighbors Therefore Mr Rewitt was not in the least surprised to see it look bright and gay on that beautiful autumn morning

As he approached the door he heard the sound of Jerry's hammer upon the lapstone, and, to his utter amazement, the voice of Jerry caroling a cheerful ditty which used occasionally to come out within the tap room as the song of the raven Raising the hatch the landlord of "Oram Arms" peeped in.

"Good mornin', Jerry," he said

"Oh! Is that you, Mr Rewitt?" replied Jerry, looking up "Come in."

Jerry looked up, wondrously clean, and had even been shaved that very morning His blue shirt looked clean, and he actually had a collar on

Mr Rewitt was so overcome by the change that he stood still with his boots under his arm, forgetting that they formed part of his mission

"You look very well, Jerry," he said, at last.

"Never felt better in my life," replied Jerry "I wish I could say the same of you You look whitish"

"I have got a bit of a cold," replied the other, "and I have been shut up a good deal with business lately Trade has been brisk, but how is it that we have not seen you?"

"Well—the fact is, sir," said Jerry, rubbing his chin, "I have been busy wiping off your score"

"But it's done, man," said Mr Rewitt, cheerfully, "the door is quite clean as far as you are concerned"

"I am glad of that."

"Others have got their share," said the landlord, facetiously, "but I think we could make room for you, if you looked us up"

"No, thanks, sir," returned Jerry, "I have had enough of chalking other people's doors, and now I chalk on my own

"Chalk on your own!"

"Yes, sir, have the goodness to turn round and look behind There is my door, half full"

"It is a wise thing to keep account yourself," said the landlord who hardly knew what to make of it "for mistakes will happen but—

"No mistake can happen, sir," interrupted Jerry, "for I am the only party as keeps that account"

"But who trusts you to do that?"

"Nobody—I trust myself," replied Jerry "The marks on your door showed what I did drink, and those on mine show what I did not drink"

A little light had got into the landlord's brain, and he had a pretty good idea of what was coming, but he said nothing

"That night when you spoke to me about the chalks on the door being a standing disgrace to me was the night of my waking," continued Jerry "No man could have lectured me better than you did and I thank you for it from the bottom of my heart As I left your house I vowed to touch drink no more, and I came home and told my wife so and we joined in earnest prayer that I might have the strength to keep my vow The next morning I went over to George Stevens' and asked him how I could go about signing the pledge He helped me like a man—and it was done

With his eyes wandering to and fro between Jerry and the chalks upon the door, the amazed landlord still remained silent, Jerry went on

"My wife wanted to work herself to death to keep me," he said "but I said no You do what you can to keep the children until my debts are paid and then I'll keep you and the children too So I went to work paying right and left and when all was paid I began to do what I ought to have done years ago—feed my wife and children I had enough to spare, and would have spent some with you And many's the time I've been tempted to go—and I'm tempted still, but when the feeling comes over me I take a drink of water or a cup of tea and put two pence into the box I've got on purpose and score a chalk on the door All of them chalks are so many two pences saved

Mr Rewitt was unable to make any particular remark but murmured in a confused manner "You've got a lot of chalk"

"Yes there is a large family," replied Jerry complacently "and the more I look at them the better I like them There is not much standing disgrace about that lot, credit if anything

"Oh yes—yes, returned the landlord "but bless me—this cold in my head is quite distressing You must have a large box for all of your two pence

"When I get six together I take them to the savings bank," replied Jerry "that's a bank better than any till They give nothing out, but banks like that return you more than you put in Until I began to handle my own chalk I had no idea how much your till swallowed up You would not trust me for a pint but I can have it back whenever I want it

"That's something," said Mr Rewitt, tartly

"It is everything to a man who has a wife and children to keep," replied Jerry "The best of us have sickness and trouble at many days and then it's a great thing to have something to fall back upon It is better to keep yourself than to go to the parish There's another thing too about these chalks I mine your went down before my wife and children were fed mine go down after that's done I think that my chalks are the better of the two, so I say to all, Chalk your own door"

Mr Rewitt had nothing to say, he could not deny it, and he could not admit it, but took refuge, like other heathen men, in flight With the boots under his arm he hastened home and presented himself before his wife in a rather excited condition

"What is the matter, Richard?" she asked

"Nothing, particular" he replied, "except that Jerry Muddle has joined the temperance lot, and he seems so firm in it that I don't believe he will ever touch a drop again.

Richard Rewitt, of the "Oram Arms," was right And Jerry who bears the name of Muddle no longer, but is called by the name to which he is entitled by right of birth, viz, that of Marden, has not touched a drop of strong drink from the day of his reformation to this His door has been filled again and again with the score he records in his own favor, and the beer he has not drank is every where around him in the form of a comfortable home, a respectable amount in the bank, and a goodly investment in a building society

The Handsomest Men in France.

Nowhere in all France can we meet with men of finer or more robust frames or of handsomer features than in Lower Normandy As a matter of statistics, the men of the Cotentin, although as a body unable to stand back to back with the men of the Doubs and Jura departments—the descendants of the 'seven feet Burgundians'—have seldom to be excluded from the ranks of the French cuirassiers on the ground of insufficient height As a matter of personal observation, it is sufficient to visit Bayeux or Coutances on market days to be convinced that the tall, athletic-looking farmers who are busy over the sale of their stock or butter, belonging not to the conventional French type, but to a wholly different one, and that Teutonic or Scandinavian In point of complexion, too, we notice, at least in certain districts, a like conformity to the northern races. Among the factory "hands" of St. Lo and the artisans of Coutances a large proportion are found to possess the fair features—light hair and blue eyes—and the long visage characteristic of the Danish or Norwegian types And the fact of these peculiarities is rendered the more conspicuous when we contrast with the populations of these town and neighborhoods that of Granville—distant not twenty miles from Coutances—where the prevalence of a dark and wholly dissimilar type suggests the presence of a sea borne colony, possibly of Basque origin —British Quarterly Review

Why a City Marshal Went to Glory.

"But didn't the cowboys murder the city marshal at Fort Dodge?" I asked

"Waal, yes," he replied with a smile "The marshal of Fort Dodge did go to glory last winter"

"How did that happen?"

"Wall, you see," he said, "the marshal was a rustler, and he played his game on the wrong party He used to catch a tender foot with rocks now and then, lock him up in the cooler, rob him of his money, and then order him to leave town That would do as long as he played it on tender-feet But a cow boy went east for a spell, and when he came back here with a long-horned collar and a bald faced shirt, the marshal tried the game on him and that was the end of it

"What did you do?"

"We only plugged him."

"Was he killed?"

"That's what the coroner said

"Then you do shoot some times?"

"Yes, there's considerable shooting on now and then When a man comes out here and punches cows for three or four years, it won't do to play no games on him"—Las Vegas Journal

Getting Even.

On a Lake Shore train coming into Detroit the other day a newly married couple, the bride appearing to be about 45 years old, and the groom being a dapper little chap a year or two younger A lady who came aboard at Wyandotte took a seat just ahead and after a few minutes she heard them criticizing her bonnet and cloak and general style Without showing the least resentment in her countenance she turned around in her seat and said

"Madame will you have your son close the window behind you?

LONDON LETTERS.

Newsy Comments on Topics that at Present are Interesting People of the Old World

NEW YORK, May 27.—[Special.]—London cables have the following points:

THE CORONATION EAGERLY AWAITED

All eyes are turned to Moscow. In the excitement created by the pageant of the coronation [illegible] wonders the shadow of Nihilism is for the moment so completely effaced. There is no sign of it in the lavish accounts that are published in every telegram from Moscow. They are rigidly inspected in St. Petersburg and all correspondents understand that it is useless to send anything that does not redound to the credit, the glory, splendor and unity of the empire. Never were arrests so numerous or of so startling a character as during the ten days prior to the czar's departure from St. Petersburg, and so far the confidence of the government in its ability to protect itself has been justified. All accounts however agree in describing the enthusiasm and devotion of the multitude in Moscow as thoroughly spontaneous and genuine while the daily spectacle in point of brilliancy and variety is of almost incredible interest. From London it is viewed with eager attention, but the culmination of the ceremony to-morrow will be hailed with a general sense of relief.

PLUNGER WALTON WARNED

The warm summer weather of the week brought out a great attendance at the Derby and the race was a capital one. The Prince of Wales is said to have made his largest winning on this occasion, it having been intimated that he was concerned in St. Blaise for some time and having backed him heavily. American coaches were not so conspicuous as on former occasions, but there was a very respectable representation. Plunger Walton has arrived in the field and he has received a solemn warning to beware how his intimacy with jockeys and stablemen comes to the attention of the stewards of the Jockey Club. They say they will not stand any nonsense, and they have already shown that they intend to enforce the rules rigidly this season.

ARRANGING FOR RESUMPTION

Senor Rivas, secretary to President Gonzales of Mexico has had several conferences with the English foreign office to arrange for the resumption of diplomatic relations with England. Lord Granville insists as a condition of this resumption that Mexico pays the $350,000 due to the British. Senor Rivas promises payment by a scheme for the conversion of the Mexican lands providing England obtains a commercial treaty with Mexico. Lord Granville will not agree to obtain the treaty but will undertake to open negotiations which will place England with its commercial relations with Mexico upon the most favored national footing and with as good tariff terms as those now enjoyed by the United States.

FRANCE GETTING INTO DEEP AND HOT WATER

The bombardment of Mayanga by the French and their destruction of a settlement inhabited mainly by German, English and American neutrals is viewed with great disfavor in England. The tone of the press is one of great hostility and this is warmly reciprocated by Paris papers. Statements are published to the effect that large quantities of arms and ammunition are on the way to Madagascar from England and America and that Madagascar intends a sturdy defense. France is at fever heat over the whole foreign policy, and her excitement over affairs in Madagascar promises to get her into trouble.

DILLON AND SULLIVAN

Dillon, late member of parliament for Tipperary, was present this evening in the house of commons for the first time since his illness. He looks better than at any time in the past two years. He will soon sail for the United States. Dillon, in company with A. M. Sullivan, attended by invitation the debate of Oxford. They were both met with a formal and warm reception. Sullivan was requested to speak on the subject of home rule. He made an eloquent plea to young England. At the close of the address the speaker was given a perfect ovation.

ST. BLAISE'S OWNERS.

St. Blaise, the winner of the Derby, was partly owned by the Prince of Wales, Lord Allington and Sir Frederick Johnson, and they shared over $400,000 on the race. The Prince and Princess of Wales gave a brilliant party in celebration of the victory. Walton, the American book maker, lost heavily on both the Derby and Oaks.

THE PARNELL FUND

The city of Cork has had its first meeting in aid of the Parnell memorial fund since the issuing of the pope's manifesto. The meeting was large but not one priest attended. This intensifies the determination of those present to prove their loyalty to Parnell, and £230 were collected on the spot for the fund.

NO HOPE FOR EXTRADITION

It is believed that the government has abandoned all hope of being able to induce President Arthur to allow the extradition, under the present treaty, of Irish refugees in the United States and it is thought the cabinet has advised the abandonment of further attempts in that direction.

CAREY HAS NOT A FRIEND

James Carey, the Dublin informer, is closing up his business, preparing to selling out all his property. He seems now to have no friends even among the officers, who have no further use for him. It is believed that he will settle down abroad under an assumed name.

ROSSA AND TYNAN BRITISH SPIES

O'Donovan Rossa and Peter J. Tynan, London evening papers of to-day declare, are undoubtedly British spies under regular pay. These declarations are backed up by certain notes, statements and have produced a genuine sensation among the Irish. Nearly all the members of the Irish parliamentary party ridicule the statements.

PRIVILEGES CURTAILED

Earl Spencer, lord lieutenant of Ireland has curtailed the privilege of Irish prisoners under the coercion act, as well as those awaiting trial. Hitherto Irish prisoners have been entitled to receive visits from friends each day, and this has been cut off.

THE QUEEN'S HEALTH.

Public feeling is excited by the alarming reports as to the queen's health. Her journey to Balmoral was hastened in order to try whether the bracing air of the north will in a measure, restore her vitality.

THE QUEEN GONE TO SCOTLAND

The queen left last night for Scotland. Various rumors of a disquieting nature are circulated about the condition of her majesty's health. It is stated that the fits of depression continue, and that the alarm of the royal family is serious.

THEATRICAL.

The Drury Lane management has offered Salvini an engagement. Mrs. Dion Boucicault is coming here on a visit to her daughter. Her husband will join her on his arrival, and arrangements have been made for them to make a tour through England.

WILL MAKE PATTI'S [illegible]

There is a serious hitch in Mapleson-Patti negotiations. The directors of the Royal Italian Opera Company refuse to sign the American contract made by Mapleson with Patti for $5000 a night, and Henry Tabbey and Maurice Grau are going to [illegible] castle to make Patti a final offer.

A [illegible]

It has been reported that the prince of Wales has expressed his desire to have Henry Irving knighted at the Irving banquet on the Fourth of July. The queen is disposed to refuse, as the honor has never been bestowed on an actor.

A REWARD FOR DESERTION

Grave doubts are expressed as to the wisdom of selecting Lord Lansdowne to succeed Lorne. It is a curious reward for his desertion of his party on the Irish land question.

AMERICANS [illegible] BUYERS.

At the Royal Academy Americans are among the readiest buyers. Millais's "Une Grande Dame" sold for $10,000, and Faed's "Boys Together" brought $1200.

WASHINGTON CITY

General Crook and the Department.

WASHINGTON, May 27.—[Special.]—Telegrams heretofore unpublished and furnished by army officials are as follows:

HEADQUARTERS MILITARY DIV. OF PACIFIC,
PRESIDIO, May 24, 1883.

To the commanding general of the department of Arizona, Whipple barracks, A. T.: Instructions have just been received from the general authorizing you under existing orders to destroy hostile Apaches. Pursue them regardless of department or national lines, and proceed to such points as you deem advisable. McKenzie will co-operate to the fullest extent. By order of

MAJOR GENERAL SCHOFIELD.
J. C. KELLOGG, Acting Adjutant General.

WASHINGTON, May 2, 1883.

Major J. Martin, Whipple Barracks, Prescott, A. T.:—Your telegram stating the strength and composition of the force accompanying General Crook in pursuit of hostile Apaches was received this morning. The good judgment heretofore displayed by the general in his operations against Indians relieves his present situation from anxiety in this camp again. In previous actions he had the entire confidence of the secretary of war.

(Signed) R. C. DRUM,
Adjutant General.

Major Martin is Crook's adjutant general and remains at Whipple barracks during the absence of the commander in the field. The telegrams are valuable as to Crook's liability to fall under the charge of disobedience of orders.

No Official News from Crook.

WASHINGTON, May 27.—The war department has not yet received any information from General Crook. Adjutant-General Drum however received the following dispatch:

FORT BLISS, El Paso county, Texas, May 26.

GEN. DRUM: Nothing authentic has yet been heard regarding General Crook. I have daily communication with the Mexican military commander, Paso Del Norte, who assures me that I shall be promptly informed if any news is received from military headquarters at Chihuahua. The commanding general of the Mexican forces at Chihuahua has also given me like assurances.

(Signed) FLETCHER, Commanding.

Yellow Fever at Havana.

WASHINGTON, May 27.—[Special.]—The national board of health has been officially informed from Havana, Cuba that yellow fever has at last gotten into the shipping in port. For some weeks it has been rife among soldiers recently shipped from Spain to Cuba. The Havana authorities have done what they could to keep it confined to the military hospital where it worked terrible destruction, men dying at the rate of a score a week. It now comes that the captain of a large vessel is down with the disease. Anticipating this information the surgeon general of the marine hospital sent his instructions to gulf ports within the past week with orders to prepare the most effectual quarantine possible.

The mystery has been solved at last,
Our teeth no longer need decay,
All troubles of the mouth are past,
By SOZODONT they're swept away.
And young and old may smile secure
With lips and teeth so bright and pure.

FOREIGN NEWS.

RUSSIA.

CORONATION NOTES

The cost of the coronation is estimated at £1,000,000, which will be covered by an issue of treasury bills.

Only thirty-two newspaper correspondents were allowed inside the cathedral during the ceremony: six Russian and seven foreign, the latter including one English and one American correspondent.

An academy professor and two Russian artists were appointed to make a sketch of all the events of the [illegible].

The Kremlin yard was so densely packed that it would have been impossible for any Nihilist to have extricated his arms should he have intended to use them against the czar. [illegible] excluded from [illegible] except at 10,000 roubles.

THE WEATHER

The weather was fine throughout the day and everything passed off successfully. Silver medals in memory of the day were distributed. [illegible] at midnight and the czar's manifesto was issued this evening. It is a lengthy document. Crowds besieged the printing office to obtain copies, the perusal of which caused great rejoicing.

The czar has addressed the following rescript to M. de Giers: "The great power and glory acquired by Russia, thanks to Divine providence, the spirit of the empire and her numerous [illegible], leave to me no urgent [illegible] for any idea of further [illegible]. My solicitude is exclusively devoted to peaceful development of the country and its prosperity, to the preservation of friendly relations with the foreign powers on the basis of existing treaties and the maintenance of the dignity of the empire. Having found in you a constant zeal and an able interpreter for the promotion of these views in the direction of our international relations, I confer upon you my order of St. Alexander Newski in diamonds as a testimony of my gratitude."

The czar's voice was grandly resonant. The metropolitan of Novgorod almost broke down in delivering his invocation.

THE CZAR'S MANIFESTO

The manifesto announces a continuance of the present state of affairs in Russia, the conditional pardon of Poles, the remission of penalties for minor political offences and other matters as previously referred to in these dispatches.

Mounted Cossacks patrolled every street. Troops lining the route of the procession remained bareheaded the whole morning.

Persons unable to obtain admission to the Kremlin remained outside or in the churches close to the walls during the best part of the day praying for the czar.

A correspondent who has witnessed the greatest pageants of the last years says the spectacle culminating in the advent of the majesties being crowned and robed was the most imposing and splendid he ever beheld.

AT ST. PETERSBURG

ST. PETERSBURG, May 27.—The coronation of the czar was celebrated by special services in all the churches to-day and by a parade of troops. The city is brilliantly illuminated to-night and the streets are thronged with people. Perfect order prevails.

FRANCE

THE FRENCH DEFEAT IN COCHIN-CHINA

PARIS, May 27.—A dispatch from Saigon dated yesterday says: Captain Rivierre was reconnoitering with 400 men landing parties from French vessels when attacked. The party was assaulted when 400 kilometres from Hanoi by a strong body of the enemy, principally pirates, and compelled to evacuate. Total loss, sixty killed and fifty wounded. Saturday's telegram, which gives the names of killed and wounded related only to the loss among sailors. The troops subsequently reoccupied the positions. Additional troops being hurried forward to Saigon aboard merchant vessels. A late dispatch from Saigon says it is generally believed to be necessary to bombard Hue and send a strong expedition to Tonquin. The minister of marine sent a telegram ordering the governor of Cochin-China to notify French troops that the chamber of deputies has unanimously passed the Tonquin credit bill and that the French will avenge her glorious children. Two additional ironclads and a cruiser have been ordered to proceed east directly.

J. J. Lloyd's Downpatrick third, and twelve ran.

ANARCHIST MEETING

ENGLAND

GOSSIP ABOUT JOHN BRIGHT

LONDON, May 27.—One of the principal topics of gossip is the rumored marriage of the Right Hon. John Bright with the sister of his first wife. Mr. Bright's friends persistently deny any such marriage as being contemplated. The conservative press, however, renews the report. Mr. Bright scorns the idea of making a formal denial of what he says is a scandalous rumor. Mr. Bright's near relatives state that this malicious fabrication has been started by partisans of the law prohibiting marriage with a deceased wife's sister. There are five sisters of Mr. Bright's first wife now living.

OSCAR WILDE PLAYED OUT IN LONDON

LONDON, May 27.—Oscar Wilde seems to be played out as an esthetic problem. He worked the art dodge in America for all it was worth and has now abandoned it. He surprised his friends at a reception given to Mr. Whistler the artist by appearing as an ordinary individual dressed in a commonplace suit and shorn of his beautiful locks. Over here he is regarded as crazy.

GERMANY

OBSERVED AT BERLIN

BERLIN, May 27.—The Russian standard was hoisted on the embassy to-day. A solemn Te Deum was performed in the embassy church at which all Prussian generals and officials were present. The emperor was slightly indisposed and the crown prince was represented by his personal adjutant general.

CHILE AND PERU

Terms of the Treaty of Peace Recently Ratified by the Two Countries

WASHINGTON, May 27.—Senor Godoy, Chilean minister, has advices from his government, via the Mexican legation at Paris, announcing the ratification of a treaty of peace between Chile and Peru. His advices state that General Iglesias, who signed the treaty on behalf of Peru, is acknowledged in the whole of northern and central Peru. The terms of the treaty include the cession to Chile for ten years of the provinces of Tarapaca, Arica and Tacna, provision being made that on the expiration of the term the question to whom the ceded territory thereafter shall belong shall be submitted to a popular vote of the people of the country, they who secure the territory to pay the other $10,000,000 before acquiring possession. Senor Godoy says northern and central Peru, which has acknowledged Iglesias, constitutes about

FIVE-SIXTHS OF THE WHOLE TERRITORY

Of Peru, and includes the capital Lima and the principal seaport, Callao. He says also that the treaty provides for the occupation by Chile of the ceded territory during the ten years covered by the terms of the cession, and in all probability the Chilean army now in Lima will remain there until the Peruvian government is fully organized and order entirely restored. Senor Godoy states that the terms of the treaty were arranged by the Chilean plenipotentiary and General Iglesias' representative at Lima and forwarded to General Iglesias in the north. Having been signed by him the treaty was returned to Lima and from there sent to Santiago de Chile, where it was ratified by the Chilean government, which on the 24th inst. promulgated the same.

MULDOON AND DINNIE.

In an Exciting Contest at San Francisco the "Solid Man" Defeats the Scotch Athlete.

SAN FRANCISCO, May 27.—[Special.]—The wrestling match at the Grand opera house last night, between Donald Dinnie, the famous all round Scotch athlete, and Wm. Muldoon, the original solid man, who claims the championship at the Græco-Roman, was largely attended. The conditions of the match were half an hour of wrestling Scotch and Græco Roman style, Dinnie to throw Muldoon twice the number of times in the former style as Muldoon threw him in the latter. For the first seven rounds the men won falls according as they alternated to their own style, Dinnie dropping his man easily while the latter would rush and invariably succeeded in getting a firm hold on the Scot's neck, grinding and twisting it until by sheer twist and jerk, he

BROUGHT HIM TO THE FLOOR

On both shoulders. In another round he lifted Dinnie off his feet carrying him to the middle of the stage and threw—literally threw—him to the floor. Dinnie struck on his head, rising quite groggy. It was evident from the start, as the Scotchman made no showing at the Græco Roman style, that he was trying to gain time so as to use up the half hour at that style slowly by making each round as long as possible and doing his own style quickly and effectively. The conditions in the Scotch hold were that the men must have locked their grasp before time was called, while in the Græco Roman the time taken was in the ordinary way and before the men actually met each other. Muldoon fully appreciated the fact that his opponent acted on the aggressive in the Scotch hold and that when time was called for alternating the event he was on his defensive and even

REFUSED TO CATCH HOLD

When he was given an opportunity. The consequence was that Muldoon clung to him the safter in Dinnie's style. In this way he gained considerable time. The latter's friends were considerably surprised when Muldoon threw him at his own hold and the house fairly shrieked when he followed with another throw under similar conditions. In fact Dinnie himself appeared crestfallen and made no fist at all at Græco Roman. Shortly after midnight he gave up the contest. Muldoon scored fifteen falls in sixteen minutes forty-five and a half seconds; Dinnie eleven falls in thirty-one minutes and six seconds. While the match was in progress "the unknown" was matched to wrestle Muldoon for $1000 a side, next Saturday. He was presented to the audience and is no less than the famous wrestler Jules Rigal, who long bore the championship of Europe. As soon as the announcement was made, bets were freely offered of two to one on Rigal.

SPARTA, TENN.—Dr. B. W. Cummings says, "I am strongly convinced of the efficacy of Brown's Iron Bitters and recommend them."

PAUPER PROSELYTES

The Refuse of Switzerland Being Shipped to the Land of Freedom by the Swiss Authorities

NEW YORK, May 27.—[Special.]—Collector Robertson [illegible] received from the treasury department [illegible] Frank H. Mason, United States consul at Basle, Switzerland, in which the attention of the authorities is called to an alleged gross violation of the laws forbidding the [illegible] to this country of criminal [illegible] immigrants. It appears that on board the Nevada, which sailed from Liverpool on the 17th, are [illegible] Mormon [illegible] Salt Lake [illegible]. [illegible] the Nevada are from Switzerland [illegible] paupers. [illegible] the Swiss [illegible] authorities of Switzerland who are exceedingly glad to be rid of [illegible]. Nearly all the immigrants [illegible] the Nevada are picked up from the [illegible] of Switzerland [illegible] to swell the ranks of the latter day saints in Utah.

A [illegible]

The consul [illegible] Switzerland are [illegible] whose passage to the United States was paid entirely by their native communes, which thus rid themselves of burdens. Citizens of Basel made an earnest protest against this illegal practice, which has been [illegible] by Switzerland [illegible] time past. It is charged that [illegible] in the United States can never be [illegible] can be freely recruited from the dregs of European society. The collector forwarded the emigration commissioners a copy of the consul's letter and requested that when the Nevada arrives she be [illegible] at once and the Mormon passengers be detained at Castle Garden until an investigation is made. The emigration commissioners will make inquiry into the status of the immigrants complained of and if it can be shown that they are paupers, insane or criminals or that their passage was paid to this country by the Swiss authorities they will not be allowed to remain.

THE DIFFICULTY OF OBTAINING EVIDENCE

"The law is very explicit in refusing to permit such persons to be landed," said the collector, "but it is extremely difficult to get evidence in those cases when the immigrants themselves deny that they have been public charges at home. It is almost impossible for us to prove to the contrary. However, if these cases appear to come within the law we shall certainly exercise the right of requiring the steamship company which brings them here to take them back again."

The Nevada is due to-day. It is the custom of the Mormon emigrant agents who have a permanent residence and an office in this city, to have everything prepared for their proselytes so as to forward the whole party to the west by way of the Erie railroad within a few hours after they are landed. While at Castle Garden the proselytes are carefully guarded. Strangers are not permitted to speak to them and everything possible is done to protect the saints from the evils and contamination of gentiles.

THE NEVADA'S PAUPER CARGO

NEW YORK, May 26.—[Special.]—The Tribune says part of the cargo on the Nevada, now on her way to this port from Liverpool, is most decidedly what we do not want. It consists of 100 or more pauper Mormons, mostly women. Now it is bad enough for the morals of a country to be obliged to take Mormons, even when they are of so-called respectable classes, but when it comes to polygamous paupers endurance ceases to be a virtue. The latter day saints would receive these poor creatures willingly enough, probably, for it is a well known fact that the time has passed when respectable women in this country can be converted into their peculiar belief, so Mormon missionaries are sending over these pauper women. The emigration commissioners however are on their guard, and undoubtedly these human rubbish will be returned to the Swiss communes whence it came.

BULLION STATISTICS.

Estimates Furnished by the Superintendent of the Mint of the Output of California and Nevada

WASHINGTON, May 27.—[Special.]—Director Burchard of the mint is engaged in preparing statistics of the bullion product of the United States. He has received reports from all states and territories where gold and silver mining is an industry. These reports are carefully revised, the object being to secure the utmost accuracy. Local reports in many instances are found to be inconsistent with the verified statistics of a number of mines in operation and the average annual output of each. In such cases the most reasonable average is sought. The following are statistics by counties of the states of California and Nevada:

THE STAGE IN SAN FRANCISCO

Barrett Scores a Genuine Success Before California Audiences—The Coming Musical Festival, Etc.

SAN FRANCISCO, May 27.—All agree in saying that Francesca Da Rimini is a great success and that [illegible] original has succeeded in surrounding herself with has been admirably [illegible] by Marie Wainwright [illegible]. Barrett's Lanciotto, the [illegible] outraged hunchback husband, has made probably his greatest hit in San Francisco. In the original story Lanciotto is a cripple [illegible] for the stage it [illegible] gives him legs of equal length and [illegible] in appearance [illegible] the hunchback [illegible] form [illegible] his strong [illegible] upright and manly [illegible]. The character is one that at the outset creates [illegible] itself [illegible] and contempt [illegible] and sympathy of the audience. Mr. Barrett with the closest conception brings out the higher and better qualities [illegible] and [illegible] enlists the sympathy of the audience [illegible] the strong ear marks [illegible] of [illegible] the best and highest at [illegible] clothed [illegible] wretched [illegible] play [illegible] that public opinion has hitherto [illegible] place him [illegible] of theatrical fame that [illegible] San Francisco [illegible] are not willing [illegible]. The play will remain on the boards [illegible] week.

[illegible] did not meet with the success it anticipated. The [illegible] fell very flat. It has been replaced by H. Byron's [illegible] other things are hoped for.

THE THOMAS [illegible]

For the Thomas festival the sale of tickets continues [illegible]. The single tickets will be offered Monday. The programmes are arranged and the selections [illegible] are pronounced [illegible]. The first will comprise selections for the orchestra from Wagner, Beethoven, Weber, Liszt, Rossini [illegible] and a selection from Leo Delibes, the composer of the [illegible] successful opera "La Vine." Emma [illegible] will sing the Prayer and Barcarolle from "L'Etoile Du Nord." Madame Rive King will give Saint-Saens' concerto No. 2 in G Minor. Mr. Remmertz, the basso, will sing Schubert's "Am Meer," and Mrs. Belle Cole will be heard in an air from "Il Proscritto."

The singers in the second concert will be Mrs. E. Humphrey Allen, Mrs. Cole, Mr. Remmertz and Miss Thursby. The third programme will introduce Miss Annie Hartdegen and Mr. Harvey. There will be given a Wagner night with full orchestra soloists and chorus. The fifth will be a Beethoven programme entirely and the others will be [illegible] suited to the close of the festival. The local chorus has long been in the hands of Mr. Loring and they are now ready to proceed with their share of the work. The latest news from the orchestra is still a record of successes.

MISS THURSBY, BARRETT AND OTHERS

Miss Thursby is winning laurels wherever she sings and it is quite natural that she should. She won her audiences here a few years ago by her singing, and since that time she has been the petted and the admired of art and royalty. The praise she has been treated to in Europe is a matter of credit to American musical culture and her reception will be worthy of her success. Thomas himself is liable to receive an ovation. Altogether the festival looks most promising.

Lawrence Barrett will shortly sail for Stuttgart, Germany, to be present at the marriage of his daughter to Baron Von Roeder, colonel of a Uhlan regiment.

Mr. Joseph Levy is retained as Barrett's business manager for next season.

Louis Morgenstein, advance agent for Madame Janauschek, who succeeds Mr. Barrett at the California theater, is in the city. Miss Virginia Brooks Thompson, who is with Madame Janauschek's company (shortly to arrive) where she plays under the name of Miss Virginia Brooks, is a member of a family of marked culture, residing in New York city, her father S. W. Thompson having been one of the most active and respected merchants of that commercial metropolis. Recognizing rare mimicking faculty in the young lady while yet an amateur, Augustin Daly once offered her an engagement, which she accepted and at once took a notable place on the regular stage.

Salvini sailed on May 2 for home taking with him about $60,000 while Chizzola and Maur, his managers, went broke.

M. J. Maur, recently with Salvini, is now managing that substantial English actress Helen Barry in Tom Taylor's piece called "Arkwright's Wife."

The Chicago Tribune says Mr. Lester Wallack's engagement has not been profitable for Mr. Haverly, so near as we can make it out. It is said Mr. Wallack played upon a certainty of $1000. If these figures are correct Mr. Wallack certainly has the best of it. The selection of "Rosedale" and "Ours" was an unfortunate one. The characters assumed by Mr. Wallack in these plays have been better acted by other people. The taste for Mr. Wallack in juvenile roles is peculiar to New York. It is an acquired taste which the people of this city have not to any extent acquired.

THE EAST SIDE.

AN IMPORTANT REMONSTRANCE

W. S. Ladd, Wm. Dalton and Thos. Rider, representing the whole of the property abutting on the L street bridge between Sixth and Eighth streets, have filed a remonstrance against the proposed rebuilding of the same. As the bridge has been admitted by the authorities to be unsafe for travel, the effect will be to close the street and drive traffic on to J street—except the city pay for the rebuilding out of the general fund. This would appear unlawful however under the new charter, which says that "Whenever it becomes necessary to replace or rebuild an elevated roadway (all bridges are deemed elevated roadways under the new charter) the same when made shall be deemed an improvement and the cost thereof shall be assessed upon the adjacent property." The situation is calculated to produce a deadlock between the council and property owners, in which event it will be interesting to watch developments, as L street being one of the main thoroughfares of the city, its closing would be a serious impediment to business and travel, to say nothing of the inconvenience occasioned to citizens in general.

MORE TROUBLE AHEAD PROBABLY

It is stated on good authority that steps will be taken by property owners to avoid payment of assessments for the Fifth street bridge on the ground that the structure is not built according to plans and specifications and the ordinance governing the same. The trouble appears to be that being erected during a high stage of water, the bridge has settled considerably, rendering it unshapely and off grade. In this connection it may be mentioned that a few weeks since the street commissioner notified the contractor he was using timbers not allowed under the law and that though his notification was not heeded he did not report the matter to the council.

NOTES

An effort is being made to organize a local sportsmen's club.

Several bodies have already been removed from Lone Fir to the River View cemetery.

Lone Fir cemetery has been supplied with water by the East Portland Water Company.

The new ordinance is evidently being engineered so as to carry its last reading over election.

Preparations are being made for a grand time at Nepbach's hall to-morrow night by the P. O. S. of A.

Rail and steamer time schedules have been placed in the cabins of the Stark street ferryboat—a convenient location for travelers.

The programme arranged for the entertainment at Nepbach's hall this evening is one of much excellence. Miss A. R. Luse will give several of her best readings.

The attention of the city fathers is drawn to the fact that the fire last Tuesday at Guerneville, Cal., by which $60,000 worth of property was destroyed, originated in a Chinese wash house.

Appearances indicate an attempt to control the recently organized militia company in the interest of a certain faction at the approaching city election. The City Guards should be guarded.

The festive and ubiquitous small boy is in the constant practice of sailing the slough over on frail rafts, some of which consist merely of a single plank. A first-class item is momentarily expected.

The brace of asinine amateurs who have mistaken their calling by attempting to run a newspaper might receive the sympathy of the community if they did not assume the role of mentors, as it is they only incur their contempt.

One of the artists engaged at the recent entertainment of the Orchestral Union, on account of ungentlemanly treatment by one of the members, left the theater during the performance which thereafter was short one of the principal instruments.

A small hunting boat belonging to Joe Ben Lane which has recently been appropriated by some one unknown was yesterday discovered under the captaincy [illegible] on the slough. Joe being notified he started in pursuit only to find the crafty captain, with his craft, had eluded his vigilance.

As the government recently advertised for 150 black horses for this department, Dan Rafferty went to Vancouver yesterday and made a reconnoiter for his missing nag, it being of the description advertised for, but after diligent inquiry and careful search and inspection his efforts were unsuccessful.

HISTORY OF THE GRANGE

Mr. D. Wyatt Aiken of South Carolina has been writing a sketch of the origin of the Grange. He says in the Country Gentleman: "The order of the Patrons of Husbandry is still in its minority. If measured by the standard of a human lifetime, and yet its [illegible] are shrouded behind a pall [illegible] of doubt as impenetrable as if it had emerged from the darkness and gloom of the middle ages. [illegible] we know and are all using, but just how much of the structure was [illegible] or [illegible] they themselves are unable to tell us. [illegible] to say that in January, 1867, O. H. Kelley, [illegible] in the agricultural department at Washington, was sent up on a mission of some sort through the south by Mr. Newton, the then commissioner of agriculture. Kelley journeyed as far south as Charleston, [illegible], thence to Savannah, Mobile, New Orleans, up the Mississippi to Memphis across the country to Atlanta and thence again to Washington by the 1st day of April following, 1867.

Impressed with the disorganization of the people, the utterly shattered agricultural sector, and grieved at the utter demoralization of its people whom he found [illegible] his anticipations [illegible] the [illegible] upon [illegible] of the country and the recuperation of its farmers [illegible] swept away [illegible] wealth and resources had [illegible] by the cruel hand of war, organization was a necessity. [illegible] however was but a transient thought [illegible] applied to the farmers of the south, for [illegible] convinced him that there was a [illegible] vital need of organization among the farmers of the nation, north as well as south, and to effect an organization [illegible] the thought of his life. He [illegible] that agricultural clubs were neither permanent nor effective, they were controlled by farmers. State [illegible] seldom if ever controlled by farmers. State and county fairs were not for farmers alone, but open to the competition of the world. In his soliloquy he queried, "Why should not the farmers join in a league peculiar to themselves, in which others shall not be admitted to membership?" Such a union would be partisan and if partisan it would be secret and if secret it must have a ritual to make it effective and attractive. This process of reasoning rapidly brought him to a conclusion and forthwith he undertook to execute the ritualistic framework of such an organization. The task was however beyond his capacity and he soon found himself wound up in deep water. But Kelley was a man not easily baffled so, with ardor unabated, he resorted to the expedient of advising with counselors.

Mr. J. R. Thompson, then as now an officer in the treasury department, and Mr. Wm. M. Ireland, then chief clerk in the finance division of the post-office department, to which bureau Kelley had been transferred in the fall of 1866, were two congenial companions whose acquaintance he had made after his return from the south. They were both schooled in the mysteries of Masonry, and the former was proficient in the composition of ritualistic work. Kelley had no hesitation in approaching these two friends. They heard his story and endorsed his efforts, and the trio had repeated consultations upon the subject. Before making visible progress, however, the necessity arose for the counsel of a practical agriculturist. By common consent, Mr. Wm. Saunders, then as now the skilled and efficient superintendent of the garden and grounds of the agricultural department, was invited to join them, which he did with some misgivings, however, because of the comprehensiveness of the work as he appreciated it. This quartet, unwilling to pass judgment upon the work of their own minds, invited the Rev. John Trimble, then an officer in the treasury department, to exercise the privilege of criticising their labors as they progressed. After a season, the Rev. A. B. Grosh, then a clerk in the agricultural department and an Odd Fellow of high repute, and Mr. F. M. McDowell, then, as now, a vineyardist of Wayne, N. Y., and a friend of Mr. Saunders, were induced to labor with the five, and these seven constituted the immortal founders of the order of the Patrons of Husbandry, though several mutual friends now unknown to the order were at sundry times consulted and suggested much that was valued, but a vast deal more that was rejected.

For nearly two years these seven men wrought with an energy unaccountable, and with a faith amounting almost to inspiration, until they completed a well devised scheme of organization based upon a ritual of four degrees for men and four for women, unsurpassed in my judgment in the English language for originality of thought, beauty of diction and purity of sentiment. Having framed a constitution, adapted to this ritual to govern them, these men met on the 4th day of December, 1867, in the little brown building now standing embowered in the trees on the corner of Four-and-a-half street and Missouri avenue, Washington, which was at that time the office of Mr. Saunders, and then and there constituted themselves the National Grange of the Patrons of Husbandry, with Saunders as master, Thompson as lecturer, Ireland as treasurer and Kelley as secretary, the remaining offices left vacant.

What a conception that seven comparatively humble and unambitious men should presume to style themselves a national organization. Was this presumption, was it fanaticism or was it inspiration?

HEBER NEWTON'S HERESY

The New York Divine's Reply to the Charges against Him

Rev. Heber Newton, rector of Anthon Memorial Episcopal church, New York, charged with heresy, after reviewing the charges seriatim, says:

If the foundations upon which the Protestant Episcopal church is built are undermined by the teachings of my book, it looks as though those foundations were of the nature of sand rather than of rock. They do not assail the citadel of the christian faith, they surrender an outwork which is no longer tenable, and in trying to hold which the position of the church seems to me imperiled. So far from reducing christianity to a transient phase of natural evolution they interpret the whole of natural evolution by christianity and find in christianity its key. My book may be "a grave scandal." There are some other grave scandals connected with the matter also. One of these is the animus with which one member of this self-constituted committee has so plainly pushed the matter of a prosecution. Another is the unwarranted prejudgment of the case in this very indictment which speaks of my having "defiantly assailed the doctrine of the church," which is the very question to be decided by the trial for which it is called. Of a kindred nature is this grave scandal has been the reckless flinging of accusations of dishonesty against me through the last three months by bishops, priests and deacons, especially the first named dignitaries, of whom better things might have been expected. It seems to me an ecclesiastical trial concerning the violation of the ninth commandment might be in order at present. It is the gravest kind of a scandal that a simple statement of a general view of the bible notoriously old and historical in the English church should have excited such surprise, and that an unpretending summing up of the provinces of the higher criticism should have aroused panic in the christian church. So far as my would-be persecutors have acted with honest solicitude for the doctrines of the church, I have naught-out respect for them, and personally I share their desire to have the legitimacy of my position tried by law.

And now that I am in for another talk let me say that I have during the whole of this winter's discussion replied to no single attack that has been made upon me, however unjust and cruel it may have seemed to me. Two or three of these most frequently repeated assertions and insinuations let me now dismiss with the comment that they deserve. The notoriety growing out of these sermons, such as it has been, I neither sought nor desired. Our leading church paper speaks of me as "strutting before the crowds of Lent morning and evening," which presumably refers to the press reports of my sermons, while a similar public appearance of a fellow clergyman of one church about the same time seemed to it eminently proper. I set out to instruct my own people, and my critics compelled me to write a book. The sermons as printed are to all intents and purposes the sermons as preached from notes and in writing for the press they were thrown into more careful form, as would have been done by any man of sense under the circumstances. But not a salient point has been weakened. I should have scorned to shirk attack by taking back in print any doctrinal position I had assumed in preaching. I am thoroughly ready to stand by my printed views and bear the responsibility of them. When I am satisfied that my position is inconsistent with our church standards it will not be necessary for a self constituted committee to facilitate my leaving the church wherein I have had so many reminders during the last few years that my room is more desirable than my company.

ABOUT A NEW PALOUSE TOWN.

PLAINVILLE, May 23.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE OREGONIAN:

No place east of the mountains is attracting more attention than the Palouse country. Its extremely fertile soil, healthy climate, with plenty of water and in close proximity to large bodies of timber, make it a favored locality for intending immigrants. There is a vast body of fine land as yet untouched by the plow, and when the Columbia and Palouse railroad reaches Plainville, which will be about six weeks, it will open for development the very heart of the inland empire. A great many new towns are springing up along the line of the road and money invested here will bring large returns. Plainville was laid out about a year ago by the Oregon Improvement Company and the beauty of the site chosen proves conclusively that the company's head was level. It is situated on Rebel Flat and is on every side surrounded by a splendid farming country. Several buildings are already going up and when the railroad reaches the town we may expect a grand boom in building. In less than a year it will undoubtedly prove a formidable rival to Colfax. The latter place is about four miles distant on the Palouse river, approached from every side by steep roads that in wet weather are almost impassable. Deep down in a rocky narrow chasm of the river the people of the town are well aware of their doubtful position and every little while send delegates to Portland to petition the railroad company to build the main line into the town, offering as an inducement free gifts of land, etc. Plainville requires no committees to herald its future prosperity. That is assured.

The town is also destined to be a shipping point of great magnitude for a large scope of fine wheat country.

The vast majority of people in Union and Rebel flats, extending east and west some twenty miles and north and south about twelve miles, are extremely anxious to see business houses established. They are tired of climbing hills when they want a plow or pound of sugar. No better place in this upper country can be imagined for the investment of capital. In a few months lots will be three times their present value, but we understand that, for the present purchasers must agree to build. This will insure the rapid growth of the town.

Any one can obtain information as to prices, particulars, etc., by writing to the Oregon Improvement Company, Walla Walla, a company that has been largely instrumental in developing the vast resources of Eastern Washington.

In Sick Headache.

DR. FRED HORNER, Jr., Salem, Va., says: "I know of nothing comparable to it to relieve the indigestion and so-called sick headache and mental depression incident to certain stages of rheumatism."

TRADE AND COMMERCE.

SATURDAY, May 26.

The Saturday afternoon closing of wholesale houses created a rush this morning but the afternoon is very quiet. Trade remains fairly active with few changes to note.

Foreign grain markets to-day show a slightly improved feeling, but beyond this there is nothing to report.

Freights firm with almost nothing doing. The Tam O' Shanter was taken for salmon loading at [illegible] rate not now stated to be 45s, but it has not [illegible] charterers. Three vessels are [illegible] the list headed this way for next season's salmon all taken some time since.

Oats firm, owing to stocks being generally in strong hands. Receipts are large and sales frequent at 2 cents.

Cured meats in good request. It would now seem that values cannot go lower owing to light visible supply and prospective good demand.

[illegible] being but few buyers in market. Quotations difficult to give, but 60 cents is [illegible] price.

Chickens, ever with off range large. To-day $5 50 is best offer.

Eggs steady at 5 cents. Receipts are not large but the demand has lessened.

Receipts past 24 hours have been 901 bbls flour, [illegible] oats, 29,500 lbs bran, 10,000 lbs millstuff, 11 sks potatoes, 106 bls hay, 32 lbs hides, 31 bxs butter, 210 doz eggs, 200 bbls lime. Also 15 bxs fruit, 510 [illegible] and 61,602 lbs wool from the eastern section.

SHIPPING NOTES

The Tam O'Shanter is in the river with cargo from San Francisco.

The Willamette is in with general cargo.

The steamer S. Homer is discharging.

The Br bark Sarah Bell, 812 tons, from London April 11th for Adelaide, comes to this port.

The Br ship Rosadhu, 1321 tons, at Otago April 7th, comes to this port.

The Br bark Duvenby, 832 tons, at Brisbane March 2d, comes to this port.

Callao dates of April 4 report a brisk demand for tonnage at 45s to 47s 6d for nitrate to the United Kingdom, 42s 6d to 43s for wheat and 40s for guano. At that time the amount of disposable tonnage on the coast was estimated at 45,000 tons.

Valparaiso dates of March 17 report the charter of two vessels at 40s for the United Kingdom and 42s 6d for the continent. Dates from the same port of April 14 report an advance of 5s on the above figures with a firm market and 27,000 tons of tonnage engaged for guano loading.

A fact worthy of note is the trial trips of the steamer State of California, the most successful steamer in point of speed in the Pacific, and the new steamer Mariposa, recently completed for the Oceanic Steamship Company of this city, show a closeness in speed that is really wonderful. By the published account recently given in our columns, the Mariposa made the run from the Four Fathom Light-ship to Alcatraz light in 2 hours and 37 minutes and the return to the point of start again in 2 hours and 28 minutes, the round distance being 75 miles, thus making an average of 15 miles per hour. The State of California, on her trial trip, made the run to Alcatraz light in 2 hours and 34 minutes and the return in 2 hours and 26 minutes, exactly the same time as the Mariposa, 5 hours, and the same average 15 miles an hour.—Alta.

SAN FRANCISCO MARKETS

SAN FRANCISCO, May 26.—The wheat market was [illegible] week. Good judges state that within sixty days wheat will be down to $1 80 with increased freight. Sugar is in good demand in anticipation of cannery demands. Peaches made their first appearance to-day, retailing at 50 cents per pound. The San Francisco Produce Exchange call board instituted a penalty of $25 for every proven fictitious sale, also a rule that marginal deposits on contracts must be 10 cents per cental, excepting on bran and millfeed, when the rate shall be 5 cents per cental.

OVERLAND FREIGHTS AND MARKETS.

NEW YORK, May 27.—[Special.]—Commissioner Fink announces that the eastern trunk lines have decided to stop all pro rata arrangements in regard to California business, and that hereafter they will charge for such business their regular proportions between Chicago or the Mississippi river and points at the seaboard. On account of this action roads from Chicago and the Mississippi river to points west will have to stop pro-rating with Pacific roads also, as they cannot afford to accept the pro-rata only on contract rate and pay eastern roads full proportion.

NEW YORK, May 27.—[Special.]—There is nothing new in the present condition of trade, the same conservatism so conspicuous among merchants all through the season continues. The shrinkage in prices has become less marked. There is also very little speculation outside of two or three exchanges. Imports continue light, many imported goods upon which duties are to be reduced after July 1, being held back while any unusual proportion of arrivals are being placed in the bonded warehouses to take avail of the new tariff. Many distributing merchants are also deferring the purchase of many kinds of goods in the hope of obtaining them on more favorable terms, after the beginning of July. The markets this week were of an unusually dull appearance, even for this advanced period in the season.

The demand for California goods is dull.

Wool—Dull with sales of 2000 pounds fall at 18½c, 4000 pounds spring at 21@25c.

Hides—Inactive but steady, with sales of 1000 lbs at 20½@21c, 60 days.

Borax—Unchanged. Manufacturers of borax are importing very largely of boracic acid in order to avoid paying the increased duty, which takes effect July 1. This will somewhat interfere with sales of California borax which is dull at 8¾ cents.

Hops—Quiet.

MARKET COMMENTS.

NEW YORK, May 27.—[Special.]—Fact. The general situation in regard to breadstuffs has changed very considerably since the beginning of May. The weather in Great Britain and western Europe has been cold and unfavorable until very recently. It is acknowledged by the Mark Lane Express and other authorities on breadstuffs that the market was diminished by the probable outcome of European grain crops and has made it certain that the deficiency in crops there will be at least as great as has been at any time estimated, and many opinions are expressed that the deficiency will be greater than for ten years past. In particular the condition of growing wheat in this country have also been less favorable, and the result of this change in these prospects is that speculations in wheat in New York and Chicago have revived.

NEW YORK FREIGHTS.

NEW YORK, May 26.—[Special.]—In the absence of any special movement in the freight market it remains without change and as a rule quiet freights prevail. At the wharves of California ships the same state of affairs is observable as also in Boston and Philadelphia. On the whole the outlook is bad for any activity during the summer months. At Philadelphia the James Drummond has just taken berth and will be full in forty days. At Boston there is no ship-loading and all shipments made are from this port. Railroad freights at Boston are inactive. Shipments include 150 cases canned fish, 25 bbls corn, 50 bbls. sugar, 150 cases canned goods, 300 kegs nails.

Freights to Portland are dull. The Sovereign of the Seas is the only vessel lading and she will be full about the 1st of June.
